NEW ATTEMPT TO THROW BACK GERMANS CHECKED.

Oncoming Forces Not Only Repelled, But Advance Made in Turn.

Sweep Across Russian Poland Brings the Kaiser Troops Within 15 Miles of Warsaw.

Both the French and the German official statements today indicate that the new attempt of the allies to throw back the Germans in Belgium has been checked, and that in the region of Ypres the Germans had not only hurled back the oncoming forces but in turn have made an advance.

The Paris announcement states that several German attacks were made and that three of them were completely repulsed. It is admitted, however, that at one point the Germans succeeded in reaching one of the first line trenches of the allies. Elsewhere in Flanders continued progress is reported. The German statement says that gains have been made in Flanders.

The French war office asserts that two German attacks were repulsed and the allies have pushed forward several trenches. Berlin reports progress east and west of the Argonne forest. Each official statement, moreover, tells of advantages won in the artillery encounter, which apparently is proceeding with undiminished intensity.

The situation in East Prussia, where the Russians have invaded German territory, remains unchanged and there is no further news from the battle for the possession of Cracow, Galicia.

It is admitted unofficially in Petrograd today that German troops are sweeping across Russian Poland and are now about 15 miles from Warsaw. The army of General Mackensen apparently is striking forward rapidly, although it is said that the other invading armies, to the north and south, are making little if any progress. The possibility of German occupation of Warsaw is seen in Petrograd, where it is said that if the Russians should withdraw from the city for strategic reasons its capture by the Germans should not be considered as important.

Emperor Nicholas is again at the front, having gone on this occasion to Trans-Caucasia, where his troops are seeking to thrust back the Turks and accomplish Russia's historic aim of planting her flag on the Bosphorus. A Turkish report states that an attempt of Russians to land troops on the shore of the Black sea near Batoum was repulsed with heavy loss to the invaders.

Germany is proud of her adventurous men-of-war in the hour of their destruction. The Admiralty at Berlin points out that the warships defeated by the British in the Atlantic had been four months on the high seas, deprived of the use of ports for obtaining supplies or repairs, notwithstanding that they were always able to obtain coal. Cruiser Dresden, last survivor of the five warships which composed the squadron, is reported to have been bottled up in the Strait of Magellan, and her fate is still in doubt.

Emperor William is said to have improved considerably. Little is known concerning the present conflict in France and Belgium, except that the fighting is more spirited and the allies are making broad though indefinite claims to success.

The reported turn in the fortunes of war in Serbia where only recently the Austrians were described as pushing the defending army to such lengths as to threaten its destruction, is said in Nish to be decisive. The claims is made that the Austrians are retreating in disorder along the line and that more than 22,000 prisoners have been taken.

AUSTRIANS REPORTED AS ROUTED IN SERBIA.

German Centre Steadily Advancing Toward Warsaw.

Regarded as Strategic Operation on the Part of the Russians.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The reported rout of the Austrian forces in Serbia, the borders of which country they crossed triumphantly just two weeks ago, together with the steady advance of the German centre in the direction of Warsaw on this, the third German invasion of Russian Poland, dominate the war news from the east and west today.

After occupying Lodz the Germans have been pushing to the northeast, toward Warsaw, and one despatch from Petrograd estimates that they are only 15 miles from the Polish capital, while another message from Petrograd, speculating on the possibility of a fall of Warsaw, minimize the importance of such an event, saying it should be regarded as a strategic operation on the part of the Russians rather than a decided German victory.

A similar view was expressed when the Russians retired from Lodz. Although conceding in effect the progress of the German centre, the Russians, judging from despatches reaching London, contend that the tide is running in their favor in the fighting south of Cracow, where combined Austro-German forces are endeavoring to move northward. They declare moreover that they are holding in check the German forces pushing down toward Warsaw from East Prussia.

It would appear today that the Serbian retirement before the Austrians some weeks ago was in reality a movement for strategic purposes. Their sharp return blow, if the Nish reports are to be accepted, had been extraordinarily effective. After sustaining enormous losses, the Austrians are being rapidly driven to the northwest, in the direction of their own borders.

In the western arena of the conflict the allies are applying pressure against the whole German line in

THREE GERMAN ATTACKS NEAR YPRES REPULSED.

Emperor's Forces Reach One of Important French Trenches.

Several Artillery Engagements in Region of Arras and Juvincourt.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The official statement given out in Paris this afternoon says the enemy yesterday was active in the vicinity of Ypres. Three of his attacks were repulsed, but one of the important French trenches was reached by the forces of Emperor William. Nevertheless, French troops continue to make progress in the direction of the enemy's lines, according to the official report. Artillery engagements are reported in the region of Arras and in the Vosges, as well as in the vicinity of Varennes and on the heights of the Meuse. In the Argonne the French advanced several of their trenches. The text of the communication follows:

"The enemy yesterday showed a certain activity in the region of Ypres. He directed several attacks against our lines, three of which were completely repulsed. At one single point on the front the Germans succeeded in reaching one of our first line trenches. On our side we continued to make progress in the direction of the enemy's lines.

"In the region of Arras and in the vicinity of Juvincourt there have been artillery engagements.

"In the Argonne we have pushed forward several of our trenches and driven back two German attacks.

"In the region of Varennes we have consolidated our gains of the preceding days. The German artillery has been very active, but we suffered no losses. A similar condition has existed on the heights of the Meuse. In the forest of Lapretre our progress has been continued and has developed. To the south of Thann we have occupied the railroad station at Asbach.

"Along the remainder of the front in the Vosges there have been artillery engagements."

DREADNOUGHTS RELIED ON TO COMMAND SEAS.

Battleships First, Submarines and Mines, in Case of War.

Daniels Thinks Too Many Craft Are Built by Contract, Too Few at Yards.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The dominating necessity of dreadnoughts to maintain the strength of great powers at sea, with submarine boats and submarine mines as minor essentials, was emphasized today by Secretary Daniels before the House naval committee. He declared that if a foreign foe came to attack the United States the battleships would first be relied upon and then would come the submarines and mines.

Mr. Daniels reiterated that the European war so far had demonstrated the wisdom of the naval program outlined for this session of Congress. "Battleships," he said, "are the only ships we can rely on to command the seas."

"We have today," said Secretary Daniels, "more and larger, speedier, more improved battleships than ever before, with a greater tonnage than ever before. We have more guns, much larger and better, with greater range than ever before, and far greater destructive power. Undoubtedly we have more complete auxiliary craft, submarines, torpedo boats and more submarines much better coast defense, more men than ever before, and the men are far more efficient, better trained and more completely equipped than in all the history of the country."

He testified that emergency battleships could be built at various places and that within 30 months was normally required for a ship building company to turn out a battleship. It might be possible to cut down the time to two years. He said here were facilities at the Newport News, Cranston, New York and Fore River shipbuilding companies. Secretary Daniels contended also that navy yards should be equipped to build warships. New York and Philadelphia yards, he said, should be able to build battleships and cruisers. Portsmouth ought to be able to build a certain character of ship at the lowest price.

"We ought to have a place to build a battleship out on the Pacific coast," he said.

Secretary Daniels said too many ships were being built by contract and too few by the navy yards. He said he would use the smaller yards to build submarines, and reiterated his view that the government ought to build submarine country have you in mind that we would likely have war with," asked Representative Hensley of Missouri. "Dahomey," replied Mr. Daniels amid laughter.

"We should not consider war with any country or build against any country," continued the Secretary. "We should prepare for our defense from whatever quarter an attack may come; a defense against any enemy. We must prepare to defend ourselves in the worst best way we can. Many people believe that our navy ought to be greater than any or all the other nations. If any country comes and attacks we must make the greatest defense we can. If you go into war you go in to win."

"For instance," he said, "the United States had no idea of taking Manila when the war with Spain broke out. Nobody supposed we would have anything to do with Manila. I am sorry we ever took the Philippines, but I want to say that Admiral Dewey acted in the most wise and statesmanlike way. There is not a single act that I ever committed in the Philippines that committed this country to any policy. His self repression and wisdom left everything as to policy to a civil government."

Urging the dominant necessity for battleships he said: "Suppose that England had no dreadnoughts; the German fleet would come out and control the seas. Any day that you pick up the papers you may see a report of a battle royal between all these battleships, compared to which these others are mere skirmishes."

GREAT WHEAT AREA IN 1915

War in Europe to Cause World-Wide Tendency to Increase Acreage.

The greatest wheat area in the world's history will be planted for the 1915 harvest on account of the European war, says Charles M. Dougherty, statistical expert of the bureau of crop estimates of the Department of Agriculture, in a report just made public. "As a result of the war in Europe," declares Mr. Dougherty, "a world-wide tendency exists to increase the acreage of wheat. Doubtless the most extensive area in the history of the world will be seeded during the present autumn and coming spring. A prospective heavy demand for this important food grain by the importing countries of western Europe is likely, if seedling conditions favor, to give extraordinary stimulus to sowings of both winter and spring varieties in the two great exporting countries of North America, and to those sowings now being finished under auspicious circumstances in Brazil, India.

"In the southern hemisphere seed sowing was completed before the war began, and the effect of present economic conditions upon extension of areas there will be manifest only in the spring and summer of 1915. "In Europe, where ordinarily over half the world's wheat is produced, the indications are that all available labor resources in both neutral and belligerent nations will be utilized to the utmost for getting in full or increased areas. In Italy, where wheat acreage is ordinarily second in extent to that of no state in Europe, excepting Russia, 1,000,000 acres, it is said, will be added to the crop.

"In the countries extra-European efforts are being exerted to increase wheat production. The services of women and children men exempt from military service, refugees, prisoners of war and soldiers temporarily relieved from the ranks are being utilized in the fields as occasions permit and require.

"Because of stranded labor conditions and of the occupation of certain territory during seedtime by contending troops, some local contractions of area seem inevitable. The reduction, however, is likely to be compensated by increased sowings in neutral nations. "In western Europe, particularly in England and France, the autumn sowings of wheat are somewhat in arrears, but as a large part of these countries is favored with a mild climate, making sowing operations possible at times during the entire winter, little anxiety is expressed over the present delay.

A HAVEN OF PEACE.
The "Swiss Protection Zone" in France Kept Sacred by Treaty.

Although France has been at war for four months there exist French districts which are neutral and peaceful. They are situated on the borders of Switzerland, and comprise the Haute Savoie towns of Saint Julien, Bonneville and Thonon, the latter including the well-known fashionable resort Evian-les-Bains. By virtue of the unratified Treaty of Vienna dated 1815, they form though part of France under French jurisdiction, "a Swiss protection zone" wherein France may maintain police, but not soldiers, or fortifications. So strict is the old agreement observed that France has refrained from sending wounded to the Evian hotels, which are now being captured every possible day, owing to their proximity to the frontier, where some of the most furious fighting of the war continues incessantly.

A FAMINE IN BUTTONS.

[Dry Goods.] One result of the war is a famine in buttons. About a year and a half ago German put Galath buttons, made of compressed milk, on the market, and they quickly captured every possible branch of the dressmaking trade by reason of their beauty and the many varieties in which they were produced, from huge wonderful colored solid-looking buttons for big coats to delicate, exotic small buttons for plain tailored blouses. Many of the most popular plain blouses of last season depended for decoration upon bright cherry-shaped buttons. This year manufacturers are menaced with the difficulty of finding a substitute.

ACCEPTED NOTIONS SHAKEN

Marriage Goes With Low Death Rate, Celibacy With a High Rate.

[New York Times.]

It seems to be true that the death rate of the unmarried, both women and men, is higher than that of the married. Indeed, recent statistics gathered in Chicago, made the difference as high as 30 per cent for bachelors and 40 per cent for maids. It has been customary to interpret such figures as proving matrimony a prolonger of life and celibacy a shortener of it. That deduction is plausible enough, but American Medicine suggests, and gives good reason for suspecting, that this is another case in which wrong conclusions may have been drawn from correct data.

While admitting the beneficial effects that often follow the assumption of family responsibilities, the writer of the article calls attention to the facts that as regards women, who as a rule do not "sow wild oats," the result cannot be ascribed to the adoption of wiser or more regular habits after marriage, and let the death rate among single women is greater than deeper for the meaning of the statistical showing, and inclines toward the belief that there must be something physically wrong or weak in the celibates as a class, else would they have followed the normal course and married betimes.

In other words, the indications are that marriage does not cause, but goes with, a low death rate, while celibacy in like manner, does not cause but goes with a high death rate. In statistical other words, the married were a selected group before they married—what would be called good risks by an insurance company—and the celibates were also selected for comparatively early death as well as for celibacy. Thus are accepted notions again shaken. If not shattered, and the necessity for using great care in the interpretation of statistics is again really illustrated. Figures don't lie, but often they do not speak plainly enough to be understood at first hearing, and sometimes their real meaning is the exact reverse of what they seem to say.

VENTILATION.

Combined Heat and Humidity Responsible for Ill Effects
in Confined Air.

[Journal of the American Medical Association.]

In the light of more modern studies in ventilation it would seem that the real explanation of the ill effects of bad ventilation is not to be found in the chemical composition of the atmosphere breathed. One is constrained to ask wherein the disagreeable or detrimental influences of poorly ventilated spaces lie. The various phases of this vital and timely, though not new, subject were discussed some time ago by qualified experts in a symposium on ventilation at the Chemists' Club in New York city. There is unanimity among them regarding the possible significance of the chemical vitiation of the air. Pure air contains nearly 21 per cent of oxygen. This may be reduced to 17 per cent, a proportion too small even to support ordinary combustion, before its diminution becomes harmful. Except in extreme conditions the amount of oxygen in the closest halls crowded with people practically never falls below 17 per cent. Oxygen will, therefore, take care of itself and may probably be wholly left out of consideration in ventilating systems. Indeed Henderson has reminded us that it is necessary to go only a short distance up into mountains to come under an atmospheric pressure such as to reduce the oxygen supply much more than it is reduced in crowded assemblies, and yet mountain air is especially healthful. The amount of oxygen in the air apparently has little or nothing to do with the stimulating or depressing properties of the atmosphere breathed in ordinary life.

The air, under the usual conditions, contains about four parts of carbon dioxide per 10,000 parts (0.04 per cent) and the standard of desired purity for the air of dwellings was long placed as low as six parts per 10,000. Experimentation indicates, however, that it does not become harmful until it accumulates to above one per cent, or nearly 10 times its usual amount. The air in crowded rooms rarely reaches 0.4 per cent, so that evidently a quantity of carbon dioxide far exceeding the highest hygienic limit which has hitherto been set up as a standard can be breathed with impunity.

The long-debated idea that expired air contains organic matter, which is toxic has been abandoned by most physiologists. The bacteria in the air need not be considered, since the comparative unimportance of the air as a vehicle of infection is recognized. We may conclude with reason, however, that the discomfort in a badly ventilated place is due to the physical condition of the air in respect to temperature, humidity and movement, and not to any chemical properties. The symptoms noted in closed, crowded rooms—restlessness, headache, dizziness, nausea, etc.—are to be attributed to heat retention. Over-heating is the chief evil to be guarded against in ventilation at present. The danger of our torrid summer days is not the heat alone, but the combined heat and humidity; it is the same factors which are responsible for the evil effects of the confined air of rooms. There is no doubt that the air of our American living rooms and many schoolrooms and other assembly chambers is kept too warm. Further investigations of the conditions actually existing in the midst of what is assumed to be inadequate ventilation are called for. [Journal of the American Medical Association.] The extraordinary thing about the shifting practices in the ventilation of public buildings is that sweeping conclusions and far reaching changes in policy have been arrived at without any detailed or systematic study such as seems essential in order to establish a safe basis for action.

It is easy to see that sentiment played a large part in the development of his idiosyncrasies. One would not also ask how much his fixed habits of business and of life were shaped by the fact that he and four of his five sisters never married.

There are few men who feel that they can afford to live behind the times, or, being able to afford every luxury, deny themselves. He had a passion for leaving things as they are. As he began his business career, at least three score years ago, this passion for leaving things as they are resulted in making him a curious figure in New York life, and every possession an anachronism. Imagine New York multi-millionaire who not only made no effort to preserve his privacy by having a private telephone number, but had no telephone. One looked in vain in the directory for Mr. Wendel's name. No spirit uncle from an illustrious generation and chambers of the shuttered clock house at the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-ninth street. No jangle of telephones called the "dumb servants" from behind their high desks at the barn-like offices at 115 Broadway. In his lexicon there was no such word as telephone.

Everything about his office building shouted its antiquity. The building itself is a survival of the architectural school whose works are so abundantly illustrated in Valentine's manual. The first floor is a shoe shop, the second a "cogger" shop for women, the third "Mr. Wendel's office," according to the sign on the door; the fourth a bazaar of diamonds and watches.

It is that unique structure, a downtown Broadway building without an elevator. If you over the street rent you must go up to "Mr. Wendel's office" on foot if you would pay it. The steps are wide and of iron marbled. The office looks like a junk shop filled with second-hand safes. There is only one partition between the front window and the rear of the office. One hardly feels that this is a partition in the real sense of the word, for the door stands wide open and any one may enter. It surrounds high desks at which gray whiskered men stand doing something or other; it is difficult to see what. The only objects in the office which do not seem to be behind the times are the young women who manipulate the keys of the typewriters and antiquated model. Of the scene of the safe business, the walls on either side of the door have a modern appearance. Many of them look as if they were at least half a century old. One surmises that they contain all the leases and deeds having to do with the innumerable parcels scattered all over the lower part of Manhattan that contribute to the estate of the curious old gentleman whose office this was. It would take a Dickens to adequately describe this curiosity shop and the family whose business headquarters it is.

BIGGEST BUDGET ON EARTH.

Lloyd George's Project for Financing Great Britain's War Expenses.

[Boston Transcript.]

There is the note of national pride in a London newspaper's characterization of Lloyd George's share of war expenses for the coming year as constituting "the biggest budget on earth." It proclaims that only in Great Britain could a finance minister, amidst the cheers of a listening Parliament, juggle so surely with hundreds of millions, tossing up immense sums and catching them with the certainty that comes of long, successful practice. In war all taxation is possible and all taxation is fair. Britons who six months ago were denouncing Lloyd George as an insatiable collector of taxes, who sooner or later would ruin the United Kingdom, accepted "the biggest budget on earth," as for cases like the present made and provided.

No one has ever accused Lloyd George of lacking boldness, and therefore there was no surprise in Parliament when he announced that the two favorite British beverages, tea and beer, must bear increased taxation. Tea, which now pays a customs duty of 10 cents a pound, will hereafter and until further notice pay 16. The chancellor estimated that the enhanced revenue from the tea cups the next year would be $16,000,000, while the half-penny added to the cost of every half pint of beer would roll up $55,000,000. Next year the income tax up to £1000 will be at the rate of 15 pence on the pound, or double what it is at present. Every Briton paying will put down 35 cents per £5. This for earned incomes only. The tax on unearned business incomes will be progressive, rising from two shilling (0.10) on incomes not in excess of £500 ($2,500) and over. The effect of the increased super-tax on incomes of £23,000 and over is thus worked out by a London newspaper. New tax this year on £10,000 ($50,000) £1230 ($6,150) next year £199 ($995). These are heavy burdens, even as items of a budget, but Lloyd George's task is to find in the shortest possible time $336,367,000 new revenues or receipts. Incidentally he mentions as the sufficient reason for his demand the fact that there are 2,000,000 men under arms for Great Britain, and his expectation to be called upon to furnish the funds required for a third million within the course of the next few months. Nor did he in these military calculations figure the cost of a huge navy.

If Great Britain were able to get along with a moderately increased army and match its purse against the purses of its enemies it would be living up to old-time precedents. In the past Great Britain has in the land wars on the continent fought more with gold than with steel. On the sea it showed its true fighting strength: on the land it subsidized the armies of the allies. This war is not of that kind. Great Britain must fight mightily on land and on sea. Consequently it has today an army of proportions never dreamed of by its great commanders of the past, and besides loans to its allies is pouring money by the hundreds of millions into the coffers of its paymaster-general for wages, supplies and equipments of its own soldiers.

NO GREAT FIGHT OF LATE ON FRENCH FRONT

Germans Preparing for An Extended Occupation.

Correspondent's Story of a Week in Field of Operations.

HEADQUARTERS OF A CERTAIN GERMAN ARMY IN PINCE, Dec. 11. (Forwarded by automobile courier to Berlin, thence to London)—A correspondent of the Associated Press, spending a week in the field of operations, has also been the guest of Generals Von Heeringen, formerly war minister and now commanding the Seventh army; Von Zwick, the conqueror of Mauberg, and Von Esmann, the conqueror of Liege and Namur.

Several hours were spent in the trenches in a picturesque old town where German riflemen and French legionnaires plan and play grim practical jokes of war upon each other from positions a scant 200 yards apart. A race of German troglodytes was found in one place on this front. Men, horses, supplies, hospitals and so forth, were housed in hillside caverns, formerly stone quarries, which were absolutely protected by a 50-foot stone roof from even the most powerful shell fire.

The morning was passed in an artillery observation stand opposite Rheims, where a powerful stereoscopic telescope, by means of which the fire of the artillery is directed, brought the observer within 100 yards of the city and cathedral and enables him to see that the cathedral and its towers were standing fairly intact, although blackened by fire. A trip of inspection was made through a labyrinth of field fortifications and approaches along the Aisne, at its nearest point to Paris, where the lines are normally 200 or 300 yards apart. The soldiers even in the foremost trenches were found living in comparative comfort. They are well supplied with blankets, food, water and clothing and are in good spirits, despite their long residence in the trenches. Desultory infantry fire is always in progress here, and the "rattle of machine guns breaks out now and then.

The artillery on both sides has thrown tons of iron daily, but there has been no great fight of late in this section of the front. Of all the impressions of the trip one of the most striking is that left by the countless stacks of unthreshed grain, stretching for miles in every direction throughout this granary of northern France. Over 100 German threshing machines of the largest size are working in the region occupied by the army, and six new ones were encountered today plugging forward to re-inforce these harvest batteries which are doing work quite as important as that of the 42 centimeter cannon. The army is not only lying on the supplies of flour and meat derived from this section of the country, but is actually sending wheat and flour back to Germany.

The German soldier at the front is smiling and well fed, as he has more warm meal daily than in peace time. The lean greyhounds seen after the dash on Paris are again rounding out into portly Germans.

The normal soldier at the front does not sing as much as formerly, partly perhaps because he has sung himself out and partly because singing in the immediate vicinity of the enemy is apt to draw fire, but he is neither discouraged nor exhausted. There is no indication whatever that his nerves are breaking under the strain of the protracted war.

No trip to the front would be complete without a visit to the field hospital. Health conditions are remarkably good, the surgeons state, even better than in peace times. There has been considerable typhoid, but this is now well in hand owing to the vigorous use of the anti-typhoid serum. The medical department is just now cleaning out three villages in the immediate vicinity of headquarters which were found to be typhoid centres. The surgeons are devoting special attention to this matter and are isolating or vaccinating the inhabitants of suspected villages.

The Germans evidently are preparing for an extended occupation.

The French peasants, under the supervision and to a certain extent under the mild compulsion of the Germans, have planted winter crops and are working in the fields. Important bridges destroyed during the occupation operations are everywhere being permanently re-built with steel from Germany. The roads are being maintained as usual by French labor and in some cases factories are being reopened.

LIBERALS THREATEN TO LEAVE.

Minister of Instruction in Spain Resigns from Office.

MADRID, Dec. 10, via Paris, Dec. 11.—During a discussion of the budget in the Chamber of Deputies today, Francisco Bergamin, minister of instruction, in upholding the appropriations for his department, expressed regret to see them opposed by those who led the country to ruin.

Count Romanones, former premier and minister of public instruction, has now a deputy, considering the minister of instruction was referring to him, declared that the chamber could not continue the debate while Senator Bergamin remained in office. Amidst a great uproar the liberal minority threatened to leave the chamber and Senator Bergamin then announced his resignation, whereupon the session was closed.

Emperor William is better, according to reports reaching here from Berlin, but he appears still to be confined to his room.

The British Admiralty remains silent concerning the reported German submarine raid on Dover yesterday and the public today is speculating as to whether over zealous correspondents were not partly responsible for this episode.

Indignation in Norway and Sweden against the seizure by Germany of vessels loaded with wood is growing. The menace of mines also is occupying the public attention and on this latter point appeals are being made to Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 11, by wireless to London.—In the official communication issued today by the German army headquarters staff, the Germans claim to have made progress on both sides of the Argonne forest and in Flanders, and to have repulsed French attacks in the Woerthe region.

The text of the official statement is as follows:

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 11.—In a statement issued today the German Admiralty makes this comment on the British naval victory in the south Atlantic off the Falkland Islands:

"The British Admiralty does not say in its statement of the battle that our squadron had been on the high seas for four months without means of communication, either cable or otherwise, and had been without a port where it could put in for repairs or supplies. Despite this it always obtained coal."

EDGELL—ALDRICH.

Youngest Daughter of Former Senator Married at Warwick Neck.

The marriage of Miss Elsie Aldrich, youngest daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Nelson W. Aldrich, and Mr. Stephen Maurice Edgell of Denver, Col., formerly of New York, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Edgell, took place Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents at Warwick Neck, in the presence of relatives and the most intimate friends of the family, and was followed by a large reception and wedding breakfast.

The decorations, which were designed by the bride's brother, Mr. William T. Aldrich of Boston, an architect, who also designed the house when it was built several years ago, were marked with great simplicity. At the south end of the drawing room, opening from the breakfast room and from the entrance hall, a low table was placed covered with a large rug, supporting a prie-dieu, behind which a screen filled the space between the windows, covered with smilax to form a solid background of green for the wedding ceremony. At each side of the platform rose pedestals bearing large jars of lilies and roses, their lacy coloring harmonizing well with the coloring of the room.

Leading to the dias through the drawing room and the hall from the door of the dining room, opposite, was an aisle formed of beautifully proportioned Louis XVI gilded standards, also the design of Mr. Aldrich, the top in spreading basket form filled with Onchitis roses and white heather. These standards were connected from rings in the sides by loops of white satin ribbon.

Through this aisle, to the music of "The Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," played by the orchestra stationed in the loggia, the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her away, and her young attendants, entered, as the bridegroom, his best man and the officiating bishops entered from the reception room through a door near the dias.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, fashioned with two tunics of lace, caught with pearl motifs, with long sleeves and full and full train of silver cloth falling from the shoulders. She wore a rulle veil falling from a coronet of orange blossoms and her shower bouquet was of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids.

Her train was borne by two pages, her young nephews, Lawrence Rockefeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Rockefeller, Jr., and Nelson W. Aldrich, 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Aldrich, who wore suits of pink satin. The bride was attended by her niece, Miss Abby Rockefeller, who wore a Kate Greenaway costume of pink satin, with poke bonnet trimmed with lace, and carried a quaint, old-fashioned basket.

The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. David H. Greer, Bishop of New York, assisted by Rt. Rev. James De Wolf Perry Bishop of Rhode Island. At the conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Edgell were assisted in receiving the congratulations of those present by the bride's father and her sisters Miss Aldrich and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

While the guests were served at the wedding breakfast at small tables ornamented with flowers, which filled the temporary breakfast room, and the dining room, the bride and bridegroom, their attendants and a few friends were served at a special table spread at the head of the main staircase on the second floor, which was ornamented with roses and garlands of smilax.

There was dancing, and later Mr. and Mrs. Edgell left on a wedding journey, after which they will live in Denver, Col.

THE SUNKEN SPILL DRIVER.

The shipyard spill driver is still sunk at the Dismalsheds. The yard foreman has not been able to find time on an expedition to raise her, but will probably make an effort tomorrow.

Proprietor Peterson says she hung out well during the blow and the party which went out to take care of her had some experiences not just exactly exciting. They left here in a launch yesterday and were obliged to stay all night and came near being shipwrecked on the rocks, because of the swelling of the engine of the launch.

The chief himself turned fire fighter for nearly an hour worked on a lively chimney fire. The house was badly smoked up and Mr. DeBolis, an ex-fireman, had some things to say.

CHIEF WORKS AT A CHIMNEY FIRE.

A still alarm at 11:57 this morning was for a supposed draft in the house owned by Andrew J. DeBolis at 107 Prospect Hill street. Soon, however, the occupants saw evidence of a chimney fire and a second call was sent in this time the chief responding in his machine but without apparatus. The chief himself turned fire fighter and for nearly an hour worked on a lively chimney fire. The house was badly smoked up and Mr. DeBolis, an ex-fireman, had some things to say.

RUSSIAN EMPEROR AT TIFLIS.

Ruler's Trip and Reception Dispel All Fears.

PETROGRAD, via London, Dec. 11.—The arrival of the Russian emperor at Tiflis and the enthusiastic reception he received in the Caucasus relieves considerable apprehension which has prevailed regarding the security of the Caucasus since the arrival of this is chronicled today. The apprehension regarding the Caucasus was due to the fact that emigrants of the Turks and the Germans had started a propaganda in that region promising the Georgians re-establishment of the old Georgian kingdom and enticing Mohammedan sympathy for Turkey. Nobody doubted the sentimentality of the Armenians and the cultured Mohammedans and Georgians, but many doubted the illiterate Georgians and Mohammedans who constitute three-quarters of the population of the Caucasus. The emperor's trip and reception have now dispelled all fears.

The body of William L. Northup, a former Newporter, was brought here today from Philadelphia for interment in the Island cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. Edward L. Brew, curate of Emmanuel Church, of which Mr. Northup was a member while living here.

He was an upholsterer and worked at his trade here for several years, later being in the employ of the late Edward H. Schermerhorn, who owned a summer residence on Narragansett avenue. Mr. Northup left in 1900, going first to Providence and then to Philadelphia, where he had since made his home. His death was sudden.

Mr. Northup was a member of Corcoran Council, Royal Arcanum, having joined that organization February 18, 1881. He was 50 years old.

OPPOSES AGITATION FOR SPECIAL INQUIRY.

Strength and Personnel of the American Navy Praised.

Weeks Protests Ag Inst Wide Publicity of Nation's Military Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Declaring that there has been too much publicity of military affairs of the nation, Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, in a speech in the Senate today, opposed agitation for special investigation of military preparedness, praised the strength and personnel of the navy and urged the organization of an army reserve.

"Any one may learn about our military or naval establishments by reading the reports of the secretaries of the departments and the reports of those who are conducting the different bureaus and branches of the service," said the Senator. "It is an open book to all our citizens and there need be no doubt about our relative positions or our capability if one is disposed to study reports instead of seeking notoriety in the press."

"In fact, there is and has been altogether too much publicity in such matters in my judgment. We have had a demonstration during the present European war of the value of secrecy in conducting military operations, and we have spread broadcast what we are doing or what preparations we have made. I have no doubt every European country is informed in the most minute detail of our condition, our land and sea, and if any change in our methods is to be made it should not be in the direction of greater publicity, but should be to protect our operations even in time of peace from scrutiny both at home and abroad."

While expressing the hope that this European war would be the last great war and that nations would see the folly of maintaining such great military establishments as great European countries have done, and that a general agreement may be made which will provide for at least a partial disarmament, Senator Weeks maintained that it was the part of wisdom to consider what course to follow in case such a result should not come.

"At this time," he continued, "it does not seem to me that it is wise or prudent to take any action which will change our policy or add to our naval equipment except by an omnibus appropriation which can be expended under the direction of the general board of the navy, with the approval of the Secretary of the Navy and the President. Based on the experience of the past, our naval establishment is such that it is adequate and practically worthless, and that the money spent on the defense are largely wasted."

Through a reserve system Senator Weeks maintained that a much larger trained army could be maintained at less expense than a permanent standing army now.

"I believe," said the Senator, "that we should present at once with will re-organize the regulars. This re-organization should give to the mobile army the proper proportion of infantry, field artillery, cavalry, engineers, signal, sanitary troops, the needed ammunition and supply trains and provide for properly equipped depots. The law must provide that the men who are trained with the colors necessary to train them as soldiers, and then pay them as soon as trained to a reserve and that while serving in this reserve the men must be paid. Make the enlistment age 18 to 21, with consent of parents, and 25 as the limit for the first enlistment."

In addition to the national reserve force, Senator Weeks would have a state militia and urged laws to provide skilled military trainers for volunteers.

FROM THE WAR ZONE.

Belgian Refugees Grateful for Hospitality Accorded Them in Amsterdam.

Description of the Devastation in Antwerp, Prices of Food and Lack of Employment.

(New York Evening Post.)

Through the courtesy of several of its readers, the Evening Post is enabled to present personal letters written by correspondents within the war zone of Europe. These letters give vivid outlines of the sufferings of combatants, as well as the philosophic hearing of the people.

The following letter was received by a man and woman in Amsterdam, who had sheltered for some weeks in their home two families of Belgian refugees. The letter was written by the father of one of the families, a painter by trade, on his return to his home near Antwerp:

"Dear Sir, November 3.—We must first of all thank you for your kind hospitality for all your good care of us, for all your kindness shown us, and above all, for your financial aid in taking us to the train the day of our departure from Amsterdam.

"A thousand thanks for the money given us which is a great help. How can we ever repay you. It is by offering you our profound gratitude and in always cherishing the memory of our stay in Amsterdam with our benefactors.

"We are happy to be able to tell you that our journey was accomplished safely and that we found our little home quite as we had left it. The children were pleased to find their little canary still alive. But what pained us most was to see the German soldiers, and to subject ourselves to their regulations; however, they are very polite to us, saying 'good evening' and saluting us.

"There is much devastation everywhere: at Deurne, 12 workmen's houses are destroyed as well as an one-story house, but the worst is at Antwerp, in the Rue du Palais. Rue des Pelgnes, the shore market, Place Verte and Rue Nationale. Berchem, too, has suffered a great deal, but of Vieux-Dieu only a few houses remain. A great many houses have been plundered, but we think the worst done by the people who remained after the bombardment, and not by the Germans. The house of Mr. M. (the little Frenchman I spoke to you about) is ruined.

"The tradespeople are beginning to come back and to open their shops. Prices are not much lower than before the war. Black bread sells at 30 centimes a kilo, butter three francs a kilo, fresh eggs 18 centimes, preserves 10 centimes, potatoes nine francs a hundred kilos. Vegetables are dear, cauliflowers are twenty, but meat is at ordinary prices, boiled beef 1 franc 30 centimes, veal 2 francs 50, lamb and pork 2 francs 80, sugar 80 centimes, petrol 15 centimes a litre, oil four francs a hundred kilo, and coke and coal 35 a hectolitre.

"Gas is burned everywhere, and the streets are lighted, but one has to put out their lights by 8 o'clock (Belgian time). The trams are running, except those of Deurne. The tracks between Antwerp and Brussels are not being repaired, one can go to Brussels by automobile for 25 francs, and one leaves daily at 10 o'clock.

"There is some work to be had, but we are waiting for the return of the rich people and the land owners. The cinematograph will re-open 'next Sunday'; we hope to go to work from one of these establishments.

"Waiting this we are trying elsewhere, and we like to think we will find some work soon. Mr. C. has applied to the director who has promised him work as soon as his factory opens. He hopes it will be in 10 or 15 days at the latest. While waiting for this he has applied at the employment bureau in Antwerp. The children will return to school next week, and are very happy at the thought of seeing their little friends again. We are each day more thankful that we took advice to return and we thank him with all our hearts.

"We hope that this will find you in the best of health and that some day we will have the pleasure of seeing you—only, if possible, let us know our whereabouts, that we may meet you at Antwerp.

"In the meantime, we beg you, dear sir and madame, to accept our sincere and respectful greetings.

"Yours gratefully,
"for the families O.—and L.—
A thousand kisses from the children."

PERSONALS.

The Prince of Wales, second lieutenant, Grenadier Guards, has been promoted to a full colonelcy.

The time has not yet come for either the United States or England to make peace overtures to the belligerent powers of Europe, in the opinion of Dr. Henry van Dyke, United States minister to The Netherlands, who was the guest at a dinner given Thursday night in New York by the Lotus Club.

Joseph Smith, president of the re-organized Church of Latter Day Saints, died at his home in Independence, Mo., Thursday. At his bedside was his son, Frederick M. Smith, who will succeed him as president of the church and other members of his family, who had been called from various parts of the United States. A revelation, announced eight years ago by Smith, designating his successor as his eldest son, lifted from the church the burden of choosing a new leader upon the death of the patriarch. The new president is 37 years old.

Representative Serrano Eliza Payne of New York died suddenly of heart failure at a apartment in Washington, at 11:15 o'clock Thursday night. He had retired to his room apparently in robust health, but telephoned the apartment house clerk at 11 o'clock, asking that a physician be sent for. When the clerk reached the room the Congressman was dying and life was extinct before the doctor arrived. Mr. Payne, who was 71 years old, lived alone, and at midnight his body lay waiting for the coroner. "Aunt friend or relative near. His death three years ago and no one could be found who knew the address of his only son."

CENTRALIA IN NO DANGER.

Passenger Steamer Survives Storm Off the California Coast.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Cal., Dec. 10.—After a night of anxiety, while her anchors dragged and a southerly gale carried her dangerously close to the rocks of Point Arguello, passenger steamer Centralia rode at anchor this morning, five miles off the California coast, at the western end of Santa Barbara channel. Lifer Harvard is standing by, the wind has died down, and the Centralia, although disabled by the bursting of a boiler tube, is in no danger.

SUMMER IN ENGLAND, 1914.

(Alice Mayne), in the London Times.)
On London fell a clearer light; Caresing pencils of the sun Defined the distances, the white Houses transfigured, one by one. The "long, unlovely street" imperished. O what a sky has walked the world!

Most happy year! And out of town. The day was prosperous, and the wheat; The silken harvest climbed the down; Moon after moon was heavenly sweet. Stroking the bread within the sheaves, Looking 'twixt apples and their leaves.

And while this rose made round her cup, The armies died convulsed; and when This choicest young silver sun went up, Softly a thousand shattered men, One wet corruption, heaped the plain. After a league-long throbs of pain.

Flower following tender flower; and birds, And lilies; and benignant skies Made thrive the serried flocks and herds— Yonder, are men shot through the eyes, And children crushed. Love, hide thy face From man's unpardonable race.

PROHIBITION NOT CARRIED.

Strength of Parliament (Equally Divided) by New Zealand's Veto.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, via London, Dec. 10.—The Licensing Bill, which the House of Representatives passed last night, is unchanged and that national prohibition has not been carried. The Prohibitionists received a setback in several places.

The returns give the government 38 members of Parliament, the opposition 29, and the Labor Social Democrats 3. As the latter support the opposition party, the strength in Parliament is equally divided, though the votes of the soldiers abroad are yet to be counted and may affect the result.

PROJECT ABANDONED.

Limited Field in Newport for a Fourth Moving Picture House.

There have been rumors that another moving picture house was to be opened in Newport, by Providence interests. Some time has indeed been spent in looking over the field, inquiring about local building laws and such things, but with the result, it is said, that the project has been abandoned.

The field would seem to be pretty well covered now and the trained eye sees the crowded houses in a different light from the public. The people are impressed only with the attendant after the performances, when every one seems to wish to go, on particular nights. The experienced man looks at the art houses and the matinees, for it is big crowds at every performance which pay, and not big crowds a few times a week. Without the fleet, despite the fact that Newport seems to have some picture crazy, there does not seem to be enough population for a fourth house to come in and build up a patronage from the overflow, when the present theatres figure on having about so many light houses during a week.

This is the same error of judgment which the people have made on the success of the beach as a financial venture, for when they have gone there it happened to be at times when many other people went. The management, on the other hand, has seen days at a time when no one appeared to be there. The expenses go on just the same.

OVER 22,000 TAKEN PRISONERS.
Pursuit of Germans Proceeding Along Serbian Front.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—A despatch from Nish, Serbia, to Reuters' Telegram Company contains a statement giving additional details of the recent overwhelming victory over the Austrians claimed by the Serbians in Northwest Serbia.

"The pursuit of the enemy is proceeding along the whole line," says the statement, "especially on our left and center."
The statement reviews the fighting of December 3 to 7 inclusive, estimates the total prisoners at upwards of 22,000, and enumerates an immense and varied assortment of war material captured, including an entire artillery depot.

NEUTRALIZING AMERICAN WAR- TERS.

Some South American statesmen have proposed that the nations of this hemisphere declare the waters of the continent to be neutral when there is a war in Europe and warn all belligerent war vessels to keep at a distance. Will they do it? How can American nations oblige European warships to keep 500 miles from the western hemisphere? It may be suggested that if nations exercise jurisdiction for a marine league from their shores they could just as well exercise it 10 or 100 leagues, but that takes us back to the fundamental fact upon which the jurisdiction of the marine league rests.

There is said to have been an occurrence of this fact not long ago off the port of New York. A belligerent war vessel was chasing a suspected vessel and came within three miles of our coast. The forts at Sandy Hook fired a couple of shots at it, whereupon it sheered off and went out to sea and the suspected vessel came into New York harbor.
Supposing the belligerent vessel had been chasing the other at a distance of 500, or 300, or even 100 miles, what could the Sandy Hook forts have done?
They would not even have known the fact, and had they known it they could not have reached the belligerent vessel which disregarded signals.

The marine league is about the distance to which the cannon of early days in international agreements could throw a shot. A nation's jurisdiction extended out to sea as far as it could defend it with guns mounted on the shore. As guns carry much farther
now, it has been more than once proposed that a nation's jurisdiction extend two, or three, or perhaps four,
leagues, but it could not in any case
be carried with the help of artillery
to such distance as to enforce the neutrality of the waters of the western hemisphere in the event of European or Asiatic wars. A war vessel seeking another would pay no attention to an invisible line at a distance out of sight and beyond cannon shot from the shore.

THE EMPHASIS IN HEALTH MAT- TERS.

There seems to be a changing of opinion on the part of some physicians regarding sources of sickness and the ill effects of lack of sanitation, along the line of the point where emphasis should be placed in the discussion of sanitary matters and the precautions
which should be taken to ward off disease and prevent its spread. Of the new view Dr. Chapin, superintendent of health in Providence, is a leading exponent. Several times lately in public addresses he has indicated with considerable emphasis that much which has been said and written regarding the danger of contagion from certain unsanitary conditions is idle and untrue, and in a paper he read in his absence before the American Public Health Association in session at Jacksonville recently, he expressed his ideas still more strongly. Dr.
Chapin has a high standing among sanitarians and his words, therefore,
carry much weight with those concerned in the care of the public health.

His point of view is that emphasis in regard to many health matters has been put on the wrong things. He does not believe there should be less attention to the public health, but that it should be put where it will do the most good, and that this has not been the case. In his paper he declared that most which is new is bad, meaning that there are many new theories concerning sources of disease and means to prevent it and its spread which are not founded on wisdom and place

the emphasis on the wrong point. He believes the old truths, which are sound still, need to be impressed upon
the people and that if this were done
the public health would be benefited
more than by the pursuit of new ideas
and the emphasizing of new fads.
Then he proceeds to point out some of the fallacies, as he calls them,
which are widely advocated to the detriment of real public health, and ridicules them in order to put the emphasis upon the old ideas which have proved their soundness and sufficiency.

It is rather startling at first to find him denouncing what he calls the heresy of the importance of dirt as a cause of disease. He explains his position by "knowing" that it is probably true that whatever encourages cleanliness tends to discourage the habits which favor infection, though he believes that to fight all kinds of dirt instead of limiting attacks to dangerous dirt is misleading and futile. It is surprising also to learn that he criticizes the publicity given to the theory of the intimate relation of air to disease. He declares that the idea of exhaled poisons has been demolished, that germs rarely float in the air, that there is still profound ignorance as to the relation of humidity to disease, and that most of the effects of foul and unventilated rooms are due to temperature and odors. These are statements which challenge attention, because they differ
so radically from the accepted ideas concerning these matters affecting the public health. That they are held today by an increasingly large number of medical men is, however, undoubtedly true, even if they do not all express themselves so freely and forcibly as does Dr. Chapin.

On the subject of food adulteration
also he gives new ideas and new cause for thought. He declares that except in a few instances this is an economic and not a health problem.
He says that as to partially decayed
food we know nothing about its relation to health. He asserts that the clean handling of food is desirable
from a sanitary point of view, but real cleanliness is difficult of attainment.
Here again he says the emphasis has been placed upon the wrong point. These assertions give a hard blow to the enthusiasts on the matter of pure food and the advocates of home economics are given a new viewpoint. He does not intend to discourage those who are working for better sanitation and purer food, but is simply trying to point out the way
so far as it has yet been blazed by which they can do the most good, to show that much which they have done
has been unnecessary and idle, and that they should change their methods
in order to make them most effective.
All this sounds rather revolutionary,
but it comes from an authority and consequently deserves the serious attention of the layman.

INVESTIGATING A DIPLOMAT.

It is a very unpleasant story which the New York World tells about Sullivan, our minister to Santo Domingo,
but it is not new; the main features were known a year ago, before any part of it became public. Then it appeared in the newspapers. Sullivan came home for an investigation, and it is so long since anything was heard of him that probably most people believed he had resigned. He had not,
and a few days ago it was announced by the Secretary of State that he had been investigated and vindicated, and would go back to Santo Domingo. An investigation by another member of the cabinet, however, has been ordered by the President.

Of course Sullivan was an "original Bryan man" or he would not have been appointed. He was a Tammany politician and professionally the lawyer for "Jack Rose," who "squealed"
in the case of the Rosenthal murder.
That equal diverted from him the law business of the run men and crooks, and an appointment as United States minister to Santo Domingo came opportunely. There he was joined by a relative who had made a competence as a coal dealer, and was apparently in the market for any sort of public work contracts which might come from the Dominican government. The activities of the American minister are reputed to have been chiefly in connection with contracts, concessions and business interests in various forms.

Sullivan is not a very important figure any way, but the fact that he is backed by William Jennings Bryan,
Secretary of State, is of considerable importance, and the ease with which Bryan was satisfied of the propriety of Sullivan's conduct is calculated to cause some disquietude to Americans who care a good deal
about the reputation of our envoys
and the influence around our Department of State. The fact that Sullivan was an "original Bryan man" is not so convincing to the country as it may seem to the Secretary of State.
If Secretary Garrison says the charges against him are not proved,
we shall be forced to be content with the verdict.

Sereno E. Payne of New York, whose death is announced, has been a member of Congress for many years,
a leader of the Republicans and a factor in the preparation of the McKinley and Dingley tariff laws. The last tariff bill enacted by the Republicans, in 1909, bears his name. Linked with that of Nelson W. Aldrich, then Senator from Rhode Island, Mr.
Payne was first elected in 1883 and served in every Congress since that time with the exception of the Fifteenth.
He returned, however, in the Fifty-first, and was never again defeated. His term of service was longer than that of any other man

now in the House, and though a straightforward, he had been a useful member.

Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture in his annual report says there is no emergency which justifies government assistance
to farmers directly through the use of cash or credit. He points out that the new bank law "takes just and particular knowledge of the farmers' requirements" and suggests that "any credit needs of the agricultural community beyond those cared for under the federal reserve law should be by a system of co-operative credit associations" financed with private funds.

A very significant statement was made at the meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in Boston, that "if the government of Russia carries out its present intention to abolish permanently all forms of alcoholic beverages, the saving in human life will be enormous." The loss of 500,000 men as the result of the present warfare could be made good in less than 10 years through complete abstinence from alcoholic beverages by all the inhabitants of Russia, it is asserted.

Some hint of the capital locked up in the telephone business of the country
may be had from the statement
before the Public Service Commission of New York that the plant in that city, including real estate in it, reaches the sum of about $66,000,000.
The figures may also show how much money would be required for the government to "take over" the entire system of the country.

Germany accepts the Pope's suggestion for a truce among the warring nations of Europe during the Christmas holidays, on the condition that all the other belligerents acquiesce. No nation, however, is likely to take the first step, as all will wait for the others, and in consequence nothing will be done.

Though Secretary Daniels admits that it would be well to build four battleships, he does not feel as if the finances of the government can stand
it. Another question is: Can the safety of the country stand it?

It always seems pleasant after a storm, particularly if it has been of three or four days' duration.

Two weeks to Christmas.

THE GREAT WAR.

A Struggle Between Pan-Slav- ism and Pan-Germanism in the Eastern Area.

The next battle in the present quarter of the great battlefield will be in the region between the Vistula and the Oder, and if the latter river is once passed by the Czars' armies, or even strongly held by them, Germany may well think the time has come for making peace.

The significance of Russian occupation of the line of the Oder may be as dramatic as all military for the position of Russia, as the dominating power among the allies will be utilized
by the Petrograd statesmen to promote Muscovite ambitions to the fullest extent. Among the statesmen are believers in the doctrine expressed in the Russian press, that the shortest way to Constantinople is via Berlin.
With Germany in a mood for peace,
and Russia hungry for Constantinople,
it would not be extraordinary if Germany, if Turkey paid the price for a cessation of hostilities, more than once
it had been Turkey's experience to be sacrificed by its allies. Today it has risked everything on the belief that Germany is invincible, and if this believer is mistaken, it must take the consequences even if these involve its exclusion from Europe.

While the great war is in its eastern fighting ground a struggle between Pan-Germanism and Pan-Slavism,
the latter can be satisfied without the exaction of German territory. The ac-ception of Constantinople, the gratification of the aspirations Russia has cherished for 200 years would be a triumph of the first magnitude for Pan-Slavism. If Germany and Russia should yield to the temptation of making peace independently of their allies but so many "scraps of paper,"
there is a means at hand for the settlement of their difficulties. As Turkey has no friends save Germany, a German-Russian agreement, if suggested with it the moral support of most neutral peoples. Moreover, it would be convenient to Germany,
which does not care to say too much about Pan-Slavism while Austria is its ally, and to Russia, whose denunciation of Pan-Germanism may be tempered by reflection on the extent of the non-Slavic element in its population. Time was when Germany and Russia were friends. That was in the era preceding the Dreikund which Bismarck preferred. German-Russian accord might well be the purpose of negotiations anxious to let both Pan-Slavism and Pan-Germanism drop out of sight.

MIDDLETOWN. Papers on Vital Questions Read at Aquidneck Grange Meeting.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

At the regular meeting of Aquidneck Grange, at the town hall Thursday evening, Worthy Master Mrs. May Chance Spooner presided.

A communication was read from Newport
County, Pomona, asking that a date be set for the coming year when it would be possible for Aquidneck to entertain Pomona. It was voted that the Middletown Grange act as hosts
in April, the sessions to be at 3 and at 7 p. m.

In the absence of Mrs. William C.
Hubbell, the secretary at the State Grange, her report was given by her husband. The total membership is 151, 34 men and 117 women.

It was voted to hold the next meeting December 17, as the regular date falls on Christmas Eve. This will be the annual election of officers. A class of candidates is being formed for the new year.

At the conclusion of the business session the lecturer's hour was conducted by Mr. Clifford B. Ward, as follows: "Does farming as a business offer sufficient compensation to the average young man for him to make it a life work?" presented by Henry C. Sherman, Jr., in the form of a paper. He believes that farming, as well as any other business, offers compensation if a man gives it his complete attention; if he properly cares for his stock, his fields, his market, the house and the family, the busy farmer, the one who finds something to do every day of the year.

In the absence of the State Grange Master, Joseph A. Peckham, in Providence
at the State Grange, the paper assigned him, "The public questions should demand the special attention of our Grange," was read by Worthy Lecturer Ward. Mr. Peckham placed the school question at the head of the list and quoted from the Grange declaration of purposes: "We shall advance the cause of education among ourselves, and for our children, by all just means within our power." He recommended larger buildings, grades,
and courses in elementary agriculture.
The tax law he considered a vital question, also the liquor traffic. The workers' compensation law was also touched upon.

The third paper was presented by Mrs. Edward J. Peckham: "How can the Grange be more of a benefit to the country?" By advocating good schools and good roads; by fostering greater friendliness and neighborliness. "Get together days" were recommended, and also the reading and discussion of books on rural subjects. Mrs.
Peckham asked Mrs. Howard S. Peckham to add in conclusion an article entitled "Forward, March," by Kenyon Butterfield of Amherst College, formerly president of the Kingston Agricultural College. This was taken from "The Country Gentleman," and recommended a getting together of all rural societies for a study of the situation. There needs to be a universal co-operation, a better development of schools, an enlarged function of the church, and the liquor traffic, which shall mean the unification of country life for one common end.

In conclusion light refreshments were served by Mrs. E. Marion Peckham and Mrs. Howard S. Peckham.

Mr. William S. Locum left Thursday morning for the State Grange meeting in Providence. Worthy Master Mrs. Spooner, also of Aquidneck Grange, returned from Providence
Thursday night in order to attend the regular meeting.

The two-and-a-half-story house
being erected on the lower south side of Miantonomi hill by James Ritchie has recently been covered in. The work is being done by a former resident of the island, Mr. David Caswell.

TEACHING BOYS TO SAVE.

Young Financiers Should be In- structed Early in Les- sons of Thrift.

"Above all, teach the children to save—economy is the sure foundation
of all virtues."—[Victor Hugo.]

The boy is father to the man and much can be made of him if caught young enough. Many a successful man says he got his start by saving and that it was the early lessons of thrift
at home that made him a saver.

Professor William A. McKeever has been a lot of time to the study and investigation of methods of training boys in this important particular. The Kansas State Agricultural College has published some of his conclusions in the form of bulletins, from which the following is an extract:
"It is in the case especially among farmers, that the growing boy never sees any money of his own except on rare occasions like Christmas and the Fourth of July, and then he regards his shining quarter as an object of curiosity and scarcely knows how to spend it. Often, in a case like this, it is found that the father is looking upon his son as a kind of investment to be made as profitable as possible. This boy's time belongs to me. I am at considerable expense for his education. He is being educated and I have a right to require him to do all he can in return. I had very little spending money during my boyhood. This is, in substance,
the sentiment expressed by a prosperous farmer. The boy was being exploited for the sake of the farm and not the farm for the sake of the boy, as the case should have been.

"I never gave one of my boys a cent," said another father who was successful in his home training.
"From childhood, under my guidance,
they always earned all they got; and thus learned to know the value of it."
My fifteen-year-old boy is a spendthrift," said another. "It simply is not in him to save, although I have been trying for three years to teach him
this lesson. Inquiry into this case brought out the fact that up to his twelfth year this boy had been thoroughly indulged in all the habits of the spendthrift."

"The boy has been taught to earn money; it is all-important that the boy be instructed carefully in the matter of saving. The evidence goes to show that a bank or trust company
furnishes the most common and satisfactory means of saving. The relation of these institutions to the boy depositor is always one of helpfulness and encouragement. It matters not how little the lad may be earning, see that he saves a portion of it. Give him a toy bank at first, and as soon as he has accumulated a dollar or more have it placed in his credit in a bank of deposit. Develop his interest in the matter by talking to him and by taking him to the bank with you, where he may see the papers made out on his deposit and develop in the young financier's mind some reasonable purpose
for which this money is being saved,
and lead him by degrees to have fond anticipations of its final use. Have the boy's savings deposited in an institution that allows interest on such accounts, explaining to him just how money grows when bearing interest and how compound interest is interest on interest."

NEUTRALIZING AMERICAN WATERS.

Some South American statesmen have proposed that the nations of this hemisphere declare the waters of the continent to be neutral when there is a war in Europe and warn all belligerent war vessels to keep at a distance. Will they do it? How can American nations oblige European warships to keep, say 500 miles from the western hemisphere? It may be suggested that if nations exercise jurisdiction for a marine league from their shores they could not as well exercise it 10 or 100 leagues, but that takes us back to the fundamental fact upon which the jurisdiction of the marine league rests.

There is said to have been an actual demonstration of this fact not long ago off the port of New York. A belligerent war vessel was chasing a suspected vessel and came within three miles of our coast. The forts at Sandy Hook fired a couple of shots at it, whereupon it sheered off and went out to sea and the suspected vessel came into New York harbor. Supporting the belligerent vessel had been chasing the other at a distance of 500, or 300, or even 100 miles, what could the Sandy Hook forts have done? They would not even have known the fact, and had they known it they could not have reached the belligerent vessel which disregarded signals.

The marine league is about the distance to which the cannon of early days in international agreements could throw a shot. A nation's jurisdiction extended out to sea as far as it could defend it with guns mounted on the shore. As guns carry much farther now, it has been more than once proposed that a nation's jurisdiction extend two, or three, or perhaps four, leagues, but it could not in any case be carried with the help of artillery to any such distance as to enforce the neutrality of the waters of the western hemisphere in the event of European or Asiatic wars. A war vessel seeking another would pay no attention to an invisible line at a distance out of sight and beyond cannon shot from the shore.

THE EMPHASIS IN HEALTH MATTERS.

There seems to be a changing of opinion on the part of some physicians regarding sources of sickness and the ill effects of lack of sanitation, along the line of the point where emphasis should be placed in the discussion of sanitary matters and the precautions which should be taken to ward off disease and prevent its spread. Of the new view Dr. Chapin, superintendent of health in Providence, is a leading exponent. Several times lately in public addresses he has indicated with considerable emphasis that much which has been said and written regarding the danger of contagion from certain unsanitary conditions is idle and untrue, and in a paper he read in his absence before the American Public Health Association in session at Jacksonville recently, he expressed his ideas still more strongly. Dr. Chapin has a high standing among sanitarians and his words, therefore, carry much weight with those concerned in the care of the public health.

His point of view is that emphasis in regard to many health matters has been put on the wrong things. He does not believe there should be too much attention to the public health, but that it should be put where it will do the most good, and that this has not been the case. In his paper he declared that most which is new is bad, meaning that there are many new theories concerning sources of disease and means to prevent it and its spread which are not founded on wisdom and place the emphasis on the wrong point. He believes the old truths, which are sound and need to be impressed upon the people and that if they were done the public health would be benefited more than by the pursuit of new ideas and the emphasizing of new facts. Then he proceeds to point out some of the fallacies, as he calls them, which are widely advocated to the detriment of real public health, and ridicules them in order to put the emphasis upon the old ideas which have proved their soundness and sufficiency.

It is rather startling at first to find him denouncing what he calls the heresy of the importance of dirt as a cause of disease. He explains his position by "knowing that it is probably true that whatever encourages cleanliness tends to discourage the habits which favor infection, though he believes that to fight all kinds of dirt instead of limiting it leads to dangerous dirt is misleading and futile. It is surprising also to learn that he criticizes the publicity given to the theory of the intimate relation of air to disease. He declares that the idea of exhaled germs has been demolished, that germs rarely float in the air, that there is still profound ignorance as to the relation of humidity to disease, and that most of the effects of foul and unventilated rooms are due to temperature and odor. These are statements which challenge attention, because they differ so radically from the accepted ideas concerning these matters affecting the public health. That they are held today by an increasingly large number of medical men is, however, undoubtedly true, even if they do not all express themselves so freely and forcibly as does Dr. Chapin.

On the subject of food adulteration also he gives new ideas and new cause for thought. He declares that except in a few instances this is an economic and not a health problem. He says that as to partially decayed food we know nothing about its relation to health. He asserts that the clean handling of food is desirable from a sanitary point of view, but real cleanliness is difficult of attainment. Here again he says the emphasis has been placed upon the wrong point. These assertions give a hard blow to the enthusiasts on the matter of pure food and the advocates of home economics are given a new viewpoint. He does not intend to discourage those who are working for better sanitation and purer food, but is simply trying to point out the way so far as it has yet been blazed by which they can do the most good, to show that much which they have done has been unnecessary and idle, and that they should change their methods in order to make them most effective. All this sounds rather revolutionary, but it comes from an authority and consequently deserves the serious attention of the layman.

INVESTIGATING A DIPLOMAT.

It is a very unpleasant story which the New York Herald tells about Sullivan, our minister to Santo Domingo, but it is not new; the main features were known a year ago, before any part of it became public. Then it appeared in the newspapers, Sullivan came home for an investigation, and it is so long since anything was heard of him that probably most people believed he had resigned. He had not, and a few days ago it was announced by the Secretary of State that he had been investigated and vindicated, and would go back to Santo Domingo. An investigation by another member of the cabinet, however, has been ordered by the President.

Of course Sullivan was an "original Bryan man" or he would not have been appointed. He was a Tammany politician and professionally the lawyer for "Jack Rose," who "squealed" in the case of the Rosenthal murder. That squeal diverted from him the law business of the gun men and crooks, and an appointment as United States minister to Santo Domingo came opportunely. There he was joined by a relative who had made a competence as a coal dealer, and was apparently in the market for any sort of public work contracts which might come from the Dominican government. The activities of the American minister are reported to have been chiefly in connection with contracts, concessions and business interests in various forms.

Sullivan is not a very important figure any way, but the fact that he is backed by William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, is of considerable importance, and the ease with which Bryan was satisfied of the propriety of Sullivan's conduct is calculated to cause some disquietude to Americans who care a good deal about the reputation of our envoys and the influences around our Department of State. The fact that Sullivan was an "original Bryan man" is not so convincing to the country as it may seem to the Secretary of State. If Secretary Garrison says the charges against him are not proved, we shall be forced to be content with the verdict.

Serenio E. Payne of New York, whose death is announced, has been a member of Congress for many years, a leader of the Republicans and a factor in the preparation of the McKinley and Dingley tariff laws. The last tariff bill enacted by the Republicans, in 1909, bears his name. Linked with that of Nelson W. Aldrich, then Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. Payne was first elected in 1883 and served in every Congress since that time with the exception of the Fifty-first, and was never again defeated. His term of service was longer than that of any other man now in the House, and though a stammerer, he had been a useful member.

Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture in his annual report says there is no emergency which justifies government assistance to farmers directly through the use of cash or credit. He points out that the new bank law "takes just and particular knowledge of the farmers' requirements" and suggests that "any credit needs of the agricultural community beyond those cared for under the federal reserve law should be by a system of co-operative credit associations, financed with private funds."

A very significant statement was made at the meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in Boston, that "if the government of Russia carries out its present intention to abolish permanently all forms of alcoholic beverages, the saving in human life will be enormous." The loss of 500,000 men as the result of the present warfare could be made good in less than 10 years through complete abstinence from alcoholic beverages by all the inhabitants of Russia, it is asserted.

Some hint of the capital locked up in the telephone business of the country may be had from the statement before the Public Service Commission of New York that the plant in that city, including real estate in use, reaches the sum of about $60,000,000. The figures may also show how much money would be required for the government to "take over" the entire system of the country.

Germany accepts the Pope's suggestion for a truce among the warring nations of Europe during the Christmas holidays, on the condition that all the other belligerents acquiesce. No nation, however, is likely to take the first step, as all will wait for the others, and in consequence nothing will be done.

Though Secretary Daniels admits that it would be well to build four battleships, he does not feel as if the finances of the government can stand it. Another question is: Can the safety of the country stand it?

It always seems pleasant after a storm, particularly if it has been of three or four days' duration.

Two weeks to Christmas.

A Struggle Between Pan-Slavism and Pan-Germanism in the Eastern Area.

The next battle in the present quarter of the great battle will be fought in the region between the Vistula and the Oder and if the latter river is once passed by the Czar's armies or even strongly held by them, Germany may well think the time has come for making peace.

The significance of Russian occupation of the line of the Oder may be estimated as well as military, for the position of Russia, as the dominating power among the allies will be utilized by the Petrograd statesmen to promote Muscovite ambitions to the fullest extent. Among the statesmen are believers in the doctrine expressed in the Russian saying, that the shortest way to Constantinople is via Berlin. With Germany in a mood for peace, and Russia hungry for Constantinople, it would not be extraordinary if Turkey paid the price for a cessation of hostilities. More than once it has been Turkey's experience to be sacrificed by its allies. Today it has risked everything on the belief that Germany is invincible, and if this belief is proved false, it must take the consequences even if these involve its exclusion from Europe.

While the great war is in its eastern fighting ground a struggle between Pan-Germanism and Pan-Slavism, the latter can be satisfied without the exaction of German territory. The location of Constantinople, the gratification of the aspirations Russia has cherished for 200 years would be a triumph of the first magnitude for Pan-Slavism. If Germany and Russia should yield to the temptation of thinking their respective pledges not to make peace independently of their allies but so many groups of paper treaties is a mere bait for the settlement of their difficulties. As Turkey has no friends save Germany, a German-Russian agreement on the basis suggested to cease fighting would carry with it the moral support of most neutral peoples. Moreover, which does not cure to say too much about Pan-Slavism while Austria is ally, and in Russia, whose denunciation of Pan-Germanism may be tempered by reflection on the extent of the non-Slavic element in its population. Time was when Germany and Russia were friends. That was in the era preceding the Dreyfus case. To revert to the policy of German-Russian accord might well be the purpose of negotiators anxious to let both Pan-Slavism and Pan-Germanism drop out of sight.

MIDDLETOWN.

Papers on Vital Questions Read at Aquidneck Grange Meeting.

[Regular correspondence of the News] At the regular meeting of Aquidneck Grange, at the town hall Thursday evening, worthy Master Mrs. May Chase Spooner presided. A communication from Newport County, Pomona Grange, asked that a date be set for the coming year when it would be possible for Aquidneck to entertain Pomona. It was voted that the Middletown Grange act as hosts in April, the sessions to be at 3 and 7 p. m.

In the absence of Mrs. William C. Hubbard, the secretary, at the State Grange, her report was given by her husband. The total membership is 151, 56 men and 95 women. It was voted to hold the next meeting December 17, as the regular date falls on Christmas Eve. This will be the annual election of officers. A class of candidates is being formed for the new year.

At the conclusion of the business session the lecturer's hour was conducted by Mr. Clifford B. Ward, as follows: "Does farming as a business offer sufficient compensation to the average young man for him to make it a life work?" presented by Henry C. Sherman, Jr., in the form of a paper. He believes that farming, as well as any other business, offers compensation if a man gives it his complete attention; if he properly cares for his stock, his fields, his machinery. The successful farmer is the busy farmer, the one who finds something to do every day of the year.

The absence of the State Grange Master, Amos L. Peckham, in Providence at the State Grange, the paper assigned him, "What public questions should demand the special attention of our Grange?" was read by Worthy Lecturer Ward. Mr. Peckham placed the school question at the head of the list and quoted from the Grange declaration of purposes: "We shall advance the cause of education among ourselves, and for our children, by all just means within our power." He recommended larger buildings, grades and courses in elementary agriculture. The tax law he considered a vital question, also the liquor traffic. The laborers' compensation law was also touched upon.

The third paper was presented by Mrs. Edward J. Peckham: "How can the Grange be more of a benefit to the Country?" By advocating good schools and good roads, by fostering greater friendliness and neighborliness. "Get together days" were recommended, and also the reading and discussion of books on rural life. Mrs. Peckham asked Mrs. Howard S. Peckham to add in conclusion an article entitled "Forward, March!" on "Community Development," by Kanyon Butterfield of Amherst College, formerly president of the Kingston Agricultural College. This was taken from "The Country Gentleman," and recommended a getting together of all rural societies for a study of the situation. There needs to be universal co-operation, a better development of schools, an enlarged function of the church, an exchange of plans which shall mean the unification of country life for one common end.

In conclusion, Mrs. Marion Peckham, wife of Mr. Marion Peckham, and Mrs. Howard S. Peckham. Mr. William S. Slocum left Thursday morning for the State Grange meeting in Providence. Worthy Master Mrs. Spooner, also of Aquidneck Grange, returned from Providence Thursday night in order to attend the regular meeting.

The two-and-a-half-story house being erected on the lower south side of Miantonomi hill by James Ritchie has recently been covered in. The work is being done by a former resident of the island, Mr. David Caswell.

TEACHING BOYS TO SAVE.

Young Financiers Should be Instructed Early in Lessons of Thrift.

[T. D. MacGregor.]

"Above all, teach the children to save—economy is the sure foundation of all virtues."—[Victor Hugo.] The boy is father to the man and much can be made of him if caught young enough. Many a successful man says he got his start by saving and that it was the early lessons of thrift at home that made him a saver.

Professor William A. McKeever has given a lot of time to the study and investigation of methods of training boys in this important particular. The Kansas State Agricultural College has published some of his conclusions in the form of bulletins, from which the following is an extract:

"It is often the case especially among farmers, that the growing boy never sees any money of his own except on rare occasions like Christmas and the Fourth of July, and then he regards his shining quarter as an object of curiosity and scarcely knows how to spend it. Often, in a case like this, it is found that the father is looking upon his son as a kind of investment to be made as profitable as possible. This boy's time belongs to his board and clothes and winter schooling, and I have a right to require him to do all he can in return. I had very little spending money during my boyhood. This, in substance, the sentiment expressed by a prosperous farmer. The boy was being exploited for the sake of the farm and not the farm for the sake of the boy, as the case should have been.

"I never gave one of my boys a cent, said another father who was successful in this home training. 'From childhood, under my guidance, they always earned all they got and this learned to know the value of it.' 'My fifteen-year-old boy is a spender,' said another. 'It simply is not in him to save, although I have been trying for three years to teach him this lesson.' Inquiry into this case brought out the fact that up to his twelfth year this boy had been thoroughly indulged in all the habits of the spendthrift.

He has been taught to earn money, it is all-important that the boy be instructed carefully in the matter of saving. The evidence goes to show that a bank or trust company furnishes the most common and satisfactory means of saving. The relation of these institutions to the boy depositor is always one of helpfulness and encouragement. It matters not how little the lad may be earning, see that he saves a portion of it. Give him a bank at first, and as soon as he has accumulated a dollar or more have it placed to his credit in a bank of deposit. Develop his interest in the matter by talking to him and by taking him to the bank, where he can see the money grow and where he may see the papers made out.

Try to develop in the young financier's mind some reasonable purpose for which this money is being saved, and lead him by degrees to have fond anticipations of its final use. Have the boy's savings deposited in an institution that allows a profit on a student's savings, explaining to him just how money grows when bearing interest and how compound interest is interest on interest.

A TRUTH STORY.
Two men, each 25 years of age, got married. Each determined to provide for his wife, when he should die. One put away $15.00 each year, in a bank, the other took out a Life Annuity Policy in the Equitable paying $25.30 as premium each year. Both died at the end of three years. The wife of the first man had in the bank $45.00. The interest, the wife of the other, received from the Equitable $200.00. Which was the wisest plan, to cover the object aimed at. ACT TODAY.

STRUCK IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Dr. Mathers Testifies That First Blow Came From the Gaius Boy.

Evidence of Witnesses of the Fight Corroborate the Story in General.

Judge Rathbun presided and the Mathers case proceeded in the superior court this morning.

Mrs. Cradle, who lives on the diagonal corner, testified. She heard a commotion and saw Dr. Mathers come out and wave his hand to the boys to go off his stoop; then he immediately knocked one boy down.

On cross-examination, by Mr. Levy, she said she went to call her husband and considered it was cowardly; Dr. Mathers "should have let the boys have it out" amongst themselves. The Gaius boy brings her papers and asked her if she saw him knocked down. At the time she did not know Dr. Mathers and did not know it was the Gaius boy who was knocked down.

It appeared that witness had made an affidavit in which she said she was a particular friend of Mr. Thomas Gaius. She did not see the Gaius boy punch another boy.

The state rested.

Mr. Levy then called Mrs. Cradle, asking her "Didn't you say in your affidavit that the first you knew of this affair was when you saw it in the newspapers?" Witness denied this. Mr. Levy said he expected to prove that the boys were ordered off, and went "beat it" in the street.

This big boy, pounding a smaller boy, that a citizen interfered. Dr. Mathers went out again, and told the Gaius boy to "beat it." The boy said "I'll beat you," and struck Dr. Mathers in the face. He instinctively struck back in self-defense, and the boy fell in the gutter.

Dr. Mathers took the stand. The boys were fighting on his steps and he ordered them away. Then he heard more noise and saw the boys. He saw the Gaius boy, who broke away and threw a rock at Gaius. Gaius went at Lee again, punching, kicking, "making a mess" of him generally.

Witness and Mr. Mansfield went out and stood about five minutes. Then the Gaius boy threw the boy apart. Gaius started again for Lee, and witness told him in a friendly way to "beat it." Gaius said "I'll beat you," and instantly landed a blow on witness's jaw. Gaius was "fighting mad," he admitted at the former trial, and he would have fought anybody. Witness instinctively struck back, and Gaius fell into the gutter; the sidewalk is narrow.

Witness said the Lee boy had no chance; he was indignant at seeing a small boy fight a small one. Witness was not particularly wrought up, and was afraid the Gaius boy would injure him—he did injure him by the blow on the jaw.

It knocked witness against the building, so that his face was swelled. On that day, Gaius was not unconscious.

George W. Mansfield testified for the defense. He lives next to Dr. Mathers. Was in his house and was attracted by the noise. The boys were flying and witness tried to separate them; it was not easy. Then witness saw the Gaius boy (lying in the gutter) put his arms over his face, and look up at Dr. Mathers. Gaius arose and backed away up the hill. On cross-examination, witness said he did not see any blow struck by Dr. Mathers or Gaius. As Gaius retreated he was threatening to take out a warrant, and Dr. Mathers was following him, waving his hand. Gaius was in the gutter, and Dr. Mathers, when standing over the Gaius boy, seemed about to help him up from the gutter.

Charles A. Perkins testified that he saw Gaius strike Dr. Mathers in the face and in Gaius's face. Gaius went down, was down three or four seconds, arose, and went up the street. Dr. Mathers following, saying: "Go on, you gutter snipe." Gaius went on, and witness thought Gaius had brought it on himself. After he was on the ground he got up his hands, apparently expecting another blow.

Lester Coggeshall Barlow, a small boy, aged 12, corroborated other witnesses for defense. He saw Gaius hit Dr. Mathers in the face when Dr. Mathers told Gaius to "beat it." Dr. Mathers struck back, right off. Dr. Mathers lay there a few seconds, and went off saying he would bring his father.

Thomas Lee Collins, the other boy in the battle (of medium size), testified. He told how he began the fracas by calling Gaius a "big stiff." Mr. Mansfield separated them and kept hold of witness. The next witness saw Gaius was in the gutter, putting his hands up, and Dr. Mathers bending over him. Gaius went away. Dr. Mathers said "Beat it." Witness saw no blows between Dr. Mathers and Gaius. Mr. Mansfield was standing where he obstructed witness's view.

The evidence being all in, at 12:55 a recess to 2 p. m. was taken.

THE OPERA HOUSE BILL.

New Vaudeville and Motion Picture Program for the Week-End.

The new vaudeville and motion picture program, presented at the Opera House Thursday to run for the remainder of the week, has as a top-liner the posing act by Burdella Paterson and her company, and it is one which must be seen to be appreciated. Miss Paterson gives a large number of poses with the aid of stereopticon slides, and the pictures are projected from beginning to end, with frequent outbursts of applause.

The comedy, "Isaac, You Tell Her," amusing, it is produced by a company of four, representing two partners in a shirt waist company, a saleswoman and the boy bookkeeper. The partners desire to discharge the saleswoman and she quite naturally does not wish to leave. The efforts of the partners to make this demand, and the efforts of the woman to retain her place, with her final success, form a series of funny incidents and dialogue.

Ted and Lazelle present a sketch "Demonic's Upside Down," which is full of witty talk. Marie Rowland presents an act in which singing, piano playing and imitations are all well done.

Three comedy pictures start the bill, and the concluding part of the program is given to a production of the well known play "Rip Van Winkle" from the Real Studio. The title role is taken by Thomas Jefferson, a son of the late Joseph Jefferson, who originated the character of Rip, and in which he made his greatest success on the stage. The younger Jefferson also played the part many times, and his father's death, and is excellent in the picture as the vagabond. The supporting company is good and the scenery, including many picturesque views in the Catskill mountains, makes a marked feature of the production.

BUSINESS TO CONTINUE.

Mr. Simon Hart's Clerks Conducting the Store for the Present.

The business of the late Simon Hart is being carried on as usual for the present. Mr. Hart's illness came at a time when his holiday stock had been purchased and was in the store, and the interests of the estate are that there shall be no break, particularly at the present holiday season. The corps of clerks have been employed at the store for some time, some of them years, and their experience is felt can be relied upon to conduct the business much the same as when it had Mr. Hart's personal attention. Mr. Willard B. Chase is at present managing the store, in which he has had several years of service.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mr. William Williams has returned from a business trip to Washington.

—Street Commissioner Hamilton is having a new crossing put in on Long wharf.

—Rev. E. H. Porter, D. D., was on Thames street today, for the first time since his recent illness.

The Water Works department is putting in a new pipe opposite Meeting street, on Marlborough.

—Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin has closed her summer residence here and is at the Hotel Gotham, New York, for the winter.

—Only six barrels of fish were brought in Thursday and they were a mixed variety. They all went to the M. and N. Company.

—There was a streak of garbage through the outer harbor this forenoon, seemingly coming in from sea on the incoming tide. There are no ships or yachts to be blamed, just now.

—Whist seems to be more popular than ever this winter. Among the latest announcements is that of Ruth Thomas Auxiliary, which has arranged to follow its whist party Monday by dancing.

—A good-sized maple on Torpedo park has been cut down. A distinguished expert who dislikes to see trees sacrificed has examined the tree and pronounces it half dead, and consequently a subject for removal.

—A brigade from the highway department, with scrapers and brooms took advantage of the so't weather and went through Thames street, cleaning the pavement on Monday today, as against the time when a one or hard spell does not permit the cleaning.

—The Rhode Island Sea Grill has been compelled to enlarge, and is preparing to add half a dozen more tables, to accommodate its patrons. There will be quite an area for the setting of tables, off the rear portion, where the tables for women are now located.

—Fort launch Captain Drum, which has been under repairs at the shipyard for an hour, was launched this afternoon, after having had her bottom painted. Two or three days' work on her engines at the Station will be needed before she will be ready to resume her place on the line.

The Mothers' Guild of Emmanuel Church have the articles made for the Red Cross Society on exhibition at the geese house after the morning and evening services Sunday. There are a large variety of these articles, which should interest people who have quite a number of them. "What can I make for the Red Cross Society?"

—Thursday evening at the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church on Annandale road Mr. George Lewis Givney of New York, assisted by his wife, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Wayward Son," before an interested audience. The views were all taken from life and were hand-painted. Mrs. Givney sang several selections.

—The old lime and lumber shed on Lopez wharf is no more, being completely demolished. From the building has been taken a large quantity of a kind of stone, known to the mariners as "lime stone," and while by most persons they are considered undesirable, others declare they are just what they have been looking for. Quantities of the material is being carted away.

—Holiday greens are in evidence in and on many of the local stores and from the end of the morning it is safe to say Newport is only a day ahead of its out-to-sea neighbors. Though some dealers have a supply of cedars, a spruce will be found better where a Hemlock is better still, but doesn't hold its leaves as long as the other trees.

WITHOUT CROSS OR ALLEY.

Male, Pure Music Holds Attention of the Audience for Two Hours.

Beethoven Sonata a Treat, Violin Numbers Delightful, at Philharmonic Society's Concert.

A large and fine audience had a season of rich and pure enjoyment at the Philharmonic Society's concert, at the Opera House Thursday evening. It was the twenty-third concert by the Philharmonic Society, the artists being Alexander Bloch, violin, and Hans Bloch, piano, and it was one of those unusual occasions when the performers were wholly carried away with ideal music, when, for something like two hours, was given without cross or alley—just noble, pure music. The people at times were almost breathless, some crying for their seats for long periods, that their eyes might try to follow their ears in catching every possible bit of such delight as never ending success of a pleasant surprise, yet all perfectly natural. There was fine technique, sufficient for any requirement; but it was so mastered that it was well-nigh forgotten altogether by players and hearers.

For the most part the music was full of "expression" of the most delicate sort, more than that it was full of "color." Yet, where fire and spirit were called for, there was a power, a great constant "inspiring" not only of the usual sort, but also of the tempo, and it was in no case overdone. There was a masterly understanding and an absolute certainty in carrying it into execution. The music seemed to permeate and swa the whole bodies of the players. These appear to be young people; one wonders what they will be after a few more years of this rare sort of study and work.

The Beethoven sonata for violin and piano (Op. 96, in G) was a delightful treat. Rarely has there been such masterly playing in this city. Every movement and every little phrase was given its full value and true interpretation. The "ensemble" was perfect in every detail, and the two players were so completely in sympathy that they were really one. It was a doing beautiful work. The violin was a perfect instrument, volume, beauty and purity of tone. The sympathetic quality was there, too. There was never a least suggestion of being in a hurry, yet when speed was the proper thing there was abundance of it. These players have a right to play Beethoven, and everybody was in bliss while hearing them. There was a recall, but no encores were given.

The piano numbers—it is a pity, to be obliged to say it—were the least enjoyable part of the fine program. Whatever may be the taste of audiences in other latitudes, Newport listeners are weary of sustained canonizing no matter how much music or skill the player may have. Yet the playing showed great technique, a faultless and beautiful touch, and except for the dynamics fine conception of the numbers played.

Other parts of the program showed the pianist to be competent to play every sort of good music. She was rightly applauded, and would win much more applause were she to give a Newport audience a real treat, by returning to play some musical numbers.

All the violin numbers were delightful, and so was the accompanying. The G string proved to be fine, there was rare work in "harmonics," the "attack" was splendid, so was the technique. All the selections were most appreciated and applauded, the "staccato" was perfect, burst, which was acknowledged by Mr. Bloch's returning to bow his appreciation.

The next concert (February 11, 1915) will be a song recital by Mrs. Florence Mulford Hunt, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera of New York. The management states that many more tickets must be sold to meet expenses.

HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

Dry Goods Stores to be Open Evenings of December 21, 22, 23 and 24.

The committee recently appointed by the Board of Trade, with reference to holiday arrangements for the dry goods stores met Thursday and recommended keeping open on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, December 21, 22, 23 and 24. The committee consists of B. F. Downing, 3d, W. B. Sherman, Jr., and M. J. Doran.

For years the local merchants have been hearing the suggestion that the other fellow was going to do what they were doing, and on holidays and as a result many stores have been open when their proprietors would like to have been closed, knowing that the closing was of questionable value. The Board of Trade took up the matter last summer, appointing a committee which has already shown what could be done by a little united effort. It has worked to the advantage of the merchants, giving them a little warning of the time when they might be expected to be closed; it has helped the clerks in arranging to use the days they were to have off, and it has greatly convenience the public, enabling them when they might expect to find the stores open and when closed.

While the committee works largely with the large stores, the others are learning by experience that when the big fellows close they must come out to do so, for the people do not come out to do so. These storekeepers have also begun to realize that it costs money for them to keep open, because of the expense of light and heat.

SCHOONER AWAITED.

Director Morton is still looking for the moving picture schooner. He had a telegram from New York this morning, saying she was in Long Island sound and would be here today or tomorrow. Mr. Morton at once had the life station observer try to find her on the horizon, but even with the aid of powerful glasses she could not be seen. He is ready with his company and they with their wardrobes and grease paint, for the enacting of the scene as soon as the schooner arrives, and can be taken around from the harbor to the vicinity of the Forty Steps.

Mr. Morton does not dare say when this will be until he can talk with the captain, but says that when the play is being enacted that those who take the trouble to go to the Cliffs in the vicinity named will have an excellent opportunity to see an exciting marine scene in the making. It may be discouraging to some, however, to state that they will not have a chance to be photographed, for it is not the purpose of this picture to show a crowd of citizens, or in fact the land, and the public will be behind the camera.

In addition to the necessity of awaiting the arrival of the schooner, the company must also have reasonably good weather and suitable light; in other words, a driving snowstorm or heavy rain will not be considered proper conditions for good photography.

STRUCK IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Dr. Mathers Testifies That First Blow Came From the Gaines Boy.

Evidence of Witnesses of the Fight Corroborate the Story in General.

Judge Hathorn presided and the Mathers case proceeded in the superior court this morning.

Mrs. Cradle, who lives on the diagonal corner, testified. She heard a commotion and saw Dr. Mathers come out and wave his hand to the boys to go off his stoop. Then he immediately knocked one boy down.

On cross-examination, by Mr. Levy, she said she went to call her husband, and considered it was cowardly. Dr. Mathers "should have let the boys have it out" amongst themselves. The Gaines boy brings her papers and asked her if she saw him knocked down. At the time she did not know Dr. Mathers and did not know it was the Gaines boy who was knocked down.

It appeared that witness had made an affidavit in which she said she was a particular friend of Mr. Thomas Gaines, and did not see the Gaines boy punch another boy.

The state rested. Mr. Levy then re-called Mrs. Cradle, asking: "Didn't you say in your affidavit that the first you knew of this affair was when you saw it in the newspapers?" Witness denied this. Mr. Levy said he expected to prove that the boys were ordered off, and that they then started a fight so fierce, this big boy punching a smaller boy, that a citizen interfered. Dr. Mathers went out again, and told the Gaines boy to "beat it." The boy said "I'll beat you," and struck Dr. Mathers in the face. He instinctively struck back in self-defense, and the boy fell in the gutter.

Dr. Mathers took the stand. The boys were fighting on his stoop and he ordered them away. Then he heard more under his window, and saw Gaines punching Lee, who broke away and threw a rock at Gaines. Gaines went at Lee again, punching, kicking, "making a mess" of him generally.

Witness and Mr. Mansfield went out and stood about five minutes. Then Mr. Mansfield threw the boys apart. Gaines started again for Lee, and witness told him in a friendly way to "beat it." Gaines said: "I beat you and instantly landed a blow on witness's jaw. Gaines was 'fighting mad,'" he admitted at the former trial that he would have fought anybody. Witness instinctively struck back, instantly, Gaines fell into the gutter; the sidewalk is narrow.

Witness said the Lee boy had no chance; he was indulgent at seeing a big boy fight a small one. Witness was not particularly wrought up. Was afraid the Gaines boy would injure him—he did injure him by the blow on the jaw.

He knocked witness against the building, so that his face was swollen. Gaines was not unconscious, K 2.

George W. Mansfield testified for the defense. He lives next to Dr. Mathers. Was in his house and was attracted by the noise. The boys went at it again, in the street. The rocks were flying and witness tried to stop it. He saw the Gaines boy (lying in the gutter) put his arm over his face, and look up at Dr. Mathers. Gaines arose and backed away up the hill.

On cross-examination witness said he did not see any blow struck by Mathers or Gaines. As Gaines retreated he was threatening to take out a warrant, and Dr. Mathers was following him, waving his hands to Gaines to keep on going. Dr. Mathers, when standing over the Gaines boy, seemed about to help him up from the gutter.

Charles A. Perkins testified that he saw Gaines strike Dr. Mathers back, instantly, in Gaines's face. Gaines went down, was down three or four seconds, arose, and went up the street. Dr. Mathers following, saying: "Go on." Witness thought Gaines had brought it on himself. After he was on the ground he expected another blow.

THE OPERA HOUSE BILL.

New Vaudeville and Motion Picture Program for the Week-End.

The new vaudeville and motion picture program, presented at the Opera House, Thursday for the remainder of the week, has as a top-biller the posing act by Burdella Paterson and her company, and it is one which must be seen to be appreciated. Miss Paterson gives a large number of poses with the aid of stereopticon slides, and the pictures and the tableaux keep the audience interested from beginning to end, with frequent outbursts of applause.

The comedy, "Isaac, You Tell Her," is a amusing. It is produced by a company of four, representing two partners in a shirt waist company, a saleswoman and the boy bookkeeper. The partners desire to discharge the saleswoman and she quite naturally does not wish to leave. The efforts of the partners to make this demand, and the efforts of the woman to retain her place, with her final success, form a series of funny incidents and dialogue.

Teed and Lazelle present a sketch "Demonic's Upside Down," which is full of witty talk. Marie Rowland presents an act in which singing, piano playing and imitations are all well done.

Three comedy pictures start the bill, and the concluding part of the program is given to production of the well known play, "Tip Van Winkle," from the Rolfe studio. The title role is taken by Thomas Jefferson, a son of the late Joseph Jefferson, who originated the character of Rip, and in the play he made his greatest success on the stage. Thomas Jefferson also played the part many times after his father's death, and is excellent in the picture as the vagabond. The supporting company is good and the scenery, including many picturesque views in the Catskill mountains, makes a marked feature of the production.

BUSINESS TO CONTINUE.

Mr. Simon Hart's Clerks Conducting the Store for the Present.

The business of the late Simon Hart is being carried on as usual for the present. Mr. Hart's illness came at a time when his holiday stock had been purchased and was in the store and the interests of the estate are that there shall be no break, particularly at the present holiday season. The corps of clerks have been employed at the store for some time, some of them for years, and their experience it is felt can be relied upon to conduct the business much the same as when it had Mr. Hart's personal attention. Mr. William B. Chace is at present managing the store, in which he has had several years of service.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mr. William Williams has returned from a business trip to Washington.

—Street Commissioner Hamilton is having a new crossing put in on Long wharf.

—Rev. E. H. Porter, D. D., was on Thames street today, for the first time since his recent illness.

—The Water Works department is putting in a new 12-inch pipe meeting street, on Marlborough.

—Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin has closed her summer residence here and is at the Hotel Gotham, New York, for the winter.

—Only six barrels of fish were brought in Thursday and they were a mixed variety. They all went to the M. and N. Company.

—There was a streak of garbage through the outer harbor this forenoon, seemingly coming in from sea on the incoming tide. There are no ships or yachts to be blamed, just now.

—Whist seems to be more popular than ever this winter. Among the latest announcements is that of Ruth Thomas Auxiliary, which has arranged to follow its whist party Monday by dancing.

—A good-sized maple on Tower park has been cut down. A disinfectant expert, who dislikes to see trees sacrificed, has examined the tree and pronounced it half dead, and consequently a subject for removal.

—A brigade from the highway department, with scrapers and brooms, took advantage of the soot weather and went through Thames street, cleaning the pavement, at mid-day today, as against the time when the hard spell does not permit the cleaning.

—The Rhode Island Sea Grill has been compelled to enlarge, and is preparing to add half as much again space for the accommodation of its patrons. There will be quite an area for the setting of tables, and the rear portion, where the tables for women are now located.

—Fort Launch Captain Dean, which has been undergoing repairs at the shipyard since her breakdown some weeks ago, is likely to remain there until next year, as the engine repairs are slow. Steel castings are required and the orders for such material are not filled with promptness.

—Tampopo Station ferryboat Ware, which has been on the ways at the shipyard for an overhauling, was launched this afternoon, after having had her bottom painted. Two or three days' work on her engines at the Station will be needed before she will be ready to resume her place on the line.

—The Mothers' Guild of Emmanuel Church will have the articles on exhibition for the Red Cross Society on exhibition at the deacons' house after the morning and evening services Sunday. There are a large variety of these articles, which should interest people who have been asking: "What can I make for the Red Cross Society?"

—Thursday evening at the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church, an Annapolis from Mr. George Lewis Olmstead of New York, assisted by his wife, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Wayward Son," before an interested audience. The views were all taken from life and were hand-painted. Mrs. Olmstead gave several selections.

—The old lime and lumber shed on Lopez wharf is no more, being completely demolished. From the building has been taken lumber and boards of a kind quite unknown to the market today, and while by most persons they are considered undesirable, others declare they are just what they have been looking for. Quantities of the material is being carted away.

—Holidays greens are in evidence in and on many of the local stores, and from the lead of trees which went to the island this morning. It is safe to say Newport is only a day ahead of its out-to-sea neighbors. Though some dealers have a supply on hand, spruce will be found scarce where a large spread of branches is desired. Hemlock is better still, but doesn't hold its leaves as long as the other trees.

WITHOUT DROSS OR ALLOY.

Noble, Pure Music Holds Attention of the Audience For Two Hours.

Beethoven Sonata a Treble, Violin Numbers Delightful, at Philharmonic Society's Concert.

A large and fine audience had a season of rich and pure enjoyment at Masonic Hall Thursday evening. It was the twenty-third concert by the Philharmonic Society, the artists being Alexander Koch, violin, and Blanche Hoch, piano, and it was one of those unusual events where the performers were wholly carried away with ideal music, which, for something like two hours, was given without dross or alloy—just noble, pure music.

The people at times were almost breathless, some exclaiming: "This is for long periods, that they might try to put their ears in catching every possible bit of such delight. It was playing which is made up of a never-ending succession of pleasant surprises. The act all perfectly natural. There was fine technique, but it was so mastered that it was well-nigh forgotten altogether by players and hearers.

For the most part the music was full of expression of the most delicate sort; more than that it was full of soul; yet, where fire and spirit were called for, there was plenty. There was a constant "shading," not only of the usual sort, but also of the tempo, and it was no case overdone. There was a masterly understanding and an absolute certainty in carrying it out. The music seemed to permeate and sway the whole bodies of the players. These appear to be young people; one wonders what they will be after a few more years of this rare sort of study and achievement.

The Beethoven sonata for violin and piano (Op. 9, in G) was a delightful treat. Hardly has there been such mastery playing in this city. Every movement and every little phrase was given its full value and true interpretation. The "ensemble" was perfect in every detail, and the two players were so completely in sympathy that they were really one; yet each was doing beautiful work. The violin was a wonder for great volume, beauty and purity of tone. The sympathetic quality was there, too. There was never a least suggestion of being in a hurry, yet when speed was the proper thing there was abundance of it. These players have a right to play Beethoven, and everybody was in bliss while hearing them. There was a recall, but no encores were given.

The piano numbers—it is a pity to be obliged to say it—were the least enjoyable part of the fine program. Whatever may be the taste of audiences in other latitudes, Newport listeners are weary of sustained canting, no matter how much music or what the player may have. Yet the playing showed great technique, a faultless and beautiful touch, and except for the dynamics fine conception of the numbers played.

Other parts of the program showed the pianist to be competent to play with no matter how much music or what the player may have. Yet the playing showed great technique, a faultless and beautiful touch, and except for the dynamics fine conception of the numbers played.

All the violin numbers were delightful. The G string, played by the violinist, was really a masterpiece. The attack was splendid, so was the technique. All the selections were much appreciated and applauded, the last bringing out a perfect burst, which was acknowledged by Mr. Morton returning to bow his appreciation.

The next concert (February 11, 1915) will be a song recital by Mrs. Florence Mufford Hunt, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera of New York. The management states that many more tickets must be sold to meet expenses.

HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

Dry Goods Stores to be Open Evenings of December 21, 22, 23 and 24.

The committee recently appointed by the Board of Trade, with reference to holiday arrangements for the dry goods stores met Thursday and recommended keeping open on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, December 21, 22, 23 and 24. The committee consists of E. B. Dowling, 24, W. B. Sherman, Jr., and M. J. Doran.

For years the local merchants have been bothering themselves over what the other fellow was going to do about keeping open during the holiday season and on holidays and as a result many the merchants have been closed, knowing that keeping open was of questionable value. The Board of Trade took up the matter last summer, appointing a committee which has already shown what could be done by a little united effort. It has worked to the advantage of the merchants, giving them a little warning of the times when they might be expected to be closed; it has helped the clerks in arranging to use the days they were to have off, and it has greatly convenience the public, informing them when the stores expect to find the stores open and when closed.

While the committee works largely with the large stores, the others are learning by experience that when the big fellows close they might as well do so, for the people do not come to shop. The storekeepers have also learned to realize that it costs money for them to keep open, because of the expense of light and heat.

SUBMARINES AT CANAL ENTRANCE.

Precisionary Measures Taken When Trouble With Japan Threatened.

Extra Session May be Avoided by Passing Appropriation Bills Without Any Delay.

(Washington correspondence of the News.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—There are now five submarines of the United States navy at the Atlantic end of the Panama canal. The way they came to be there is interesting, and goes a long way to prove that if the Japanese had not been kept so secret so long there would have been less criticism on account of apparent failure to protect the canal when trouble with Japan threatened not long ago. The Congressional delegation which recently visited the canal found these submarines in the harbor. "What are they doing here?" was the natural question and the facts came out.

When danger threatened with Japan over the California alien land law, these submarines were sent to Panama, and they have remained there ever since as a precautionary measure for use in case anything should happen to the canal.

There were no submarines on the Pacific side and that end of the canal was without protection, but Colonel Goethals received instructions to prepare a method of transporting the submarines to the Pacific side of the canal at that time not being completed so as to afford the passage of ships.

Colonel Goethals began the construction of immense cradles into which the submarines could be floated and by huge cranes hoisted on flat cars and taken across the isthmus. If they were needed on the Pacific side, the men who were working on the cradles did not know what they were for and were not told. The cradles are now at the canal, but the submarines now as the submarines can be sent through the canal in eight hours.

Possibly the sending of the submarines to Panama was kept secret for fear that it might irritate Japan, for it was the policy of the administration to do nothing which would indicate that the United States had the least idea of possible hostilities with the island empire. Yet it seems that there was some precaution taken. No doubt if there had been hostilities Japan would have learned that her battleships were not safe near the entrance to the Panama canal.

"I am in favor of clearing the way for appropriation bills," announced Majority Leader Underwood when Congress convened. "Every other measure must give way to the supply bills. If there is time for anything else when the appropriation bills are not ready we will consider other legislation. We want to avoid any cause for an extra session." As everybody says the same thing it looks as if the extra session will be avoided, even if the President has to go to the board.

If the President is bent upon having the conservation bills and the shipping bill passed immediately he may have an extra session after all. If he says, "I will not take the case of the Canadian reciprocity bill," there will be an extra session, there may be such a session next spring in spite of all the efforts to avoid it. The probabilities are that the President will make no such declaration.

For fear that some one may start a filibuster and disarrange the plan for rushing business in the Senate several parliamentary sharps are digging up precedents to prevent filibustering. The fact is that a number of senseless filibusters have been carried on in recent years, the lines have been tightening, and some day a situation will arise which will spring closure on the Senate and a majority will accept it.

In the three months since the Panama canal was open for commercial traffic 102 east-bound vessels with 221,000 tons and 110 west-bound vessels with 457,991 tons have passed through the waterway. Of course it is understood that if there had been no war in Europe the traffic would have been much greater.

Enough legislation has been recommended by the President and the different cabinet officers to keep Congress continually busy for five years. But even at that other administrations have been more prolific. President Roosevelt submitted recommendations which would have taken many more than that. He submitted many just as "feeler."

There is a higher literary plane, both in message and cabinet officers' reports, than has been seen. Possibly that is due to the influence of the scholar in the White House.

A PAN-AMERICAN DOLLAR.

Unit for All Countries Suggested by Horace Greeley Knowles.

(Philadelphia Enquirer.)

Former Minister to Bolivia Horace Greeley Knowles, has been taking a lively interest in the efforts to increase our South American trade. He has been speaking to commercial houses all over the country and his remarks were sane and safe. He insists that we must furnish capital to South America; that we must change our tactics in dealing with the Latin-American races, and that especially we must install a good banking system to the southward.

His latest plan is to establish a Pan-American dollar for the purpose of all-American trade. This is to be a trade dollar, but unlike the silver prototype, it is to be of the United States standard of weight and fineness in gold and silver and is to be marked on one side with the usual arms of this country and on the other side a device to show its international character. He thinks this will greatly facilitate trade and will have the effect of stimulating the Latin-American peoples to get on a sound money basis in those cases where they now use devaluated currencies.

It is an inviting plan, because it tends to simplify an abstruse subject. It would not do away with fluctuations in exchange, for these are based on the law of supply and demand but it would make the matter easier for the ordinary person to comprehend and would lessen the amount of profits by brokers. The various central and South American republics have different systems of coinage, and international bankers have done a thriving business in exchange, especially houses in London and Hamburg with South America connections. But with a unit for all countries there would be a chance to develop trade more easily, especially if the country has to do the financing.

PREMIERS' PROBLEMS.

that these proceedings were to evade certain provisions in the new plan.

There is a rumor that the alleged illegal election of the new men is to be tested, one plan proposed being to secure an injunction against paying their salaries, on the ground that the Board of Aldermen had no right to elect the men even if the Firewards did recommend, and hence the board has no right to approve the pay rolls with these names on them.

COLORED LABOR IN FRANCE.

Men From Algeria Find Employment in Coal Fields and Vineyards.

(Boston Transcript.)

While the Hindu tries in vain to enter British Columbia, the Kabyle from Algeria is invited to take up his residence anywhere in France.

Mediteranean to the British channel. Already several thousand African laborers are at work in the coal fields of the north and the vineyards of the south. Handicapped by a low birth rate and high mortality statistics, the population of France no longer suffices to meet the demands for labor made upon it by increasing industrial development.

The satisfaction given by African labor in France has attracted attention to the vast national reservoir of labor which France has at her disposal in her colonies. Since 1910, when a few Algerian natives were taken on at the Courrières collieries and in the oil refineries, the possibility of this solution has been seriously tested. The first batch of imported Kabyles having given good results they have been brought to France in increasing numbers, and there are now 7,000 or 8,000 scattered through the industrial and the wine-growing districts of the country. About 1,000 have found employment in Paris in the sugar refineries, tube railways and omnibus services.

The men will gain by substituting for the hundreds of thousands of German laborers and Italians along the frontier French citizens, many of whom are trained soldiers. The millions of francs which are sent to France from the country by the Belgian, Italian and German workmen will be diverted to Algeria, and that this would be no small benefit to the colony is shown by the fact that in spite of the small number of Arabs at present in France nearly $350,000 was sent through one Algerian postoffice in six months by these laborers. The men will return to their villages with a new standard of consumption, and the general trade of France and Algeria will thus benefit. A scheme for the establishment of a large Kabyle recruiting agency has been suggested to the colliery companies and other large employers of labor.

that these proceedings were to evade certain provisions in the new law. There is a rumor that the alleged legal election of the new men is to be tested, one plan proposed being to secure an injunction against paying their salaries, on the ground that the Board of Aldermen had no right to elect the men even if the firewards did recommend, and hence the board has no right to approve the pay rolls with these names on them.

COLORED LABOR IN FRANCE.

Men From Algeria Find Employment in Coal Fields and Vineyards.

[Boston Transcript.]

While the Hindu tries in vain to enter British Columbia, the Kabyle from Algeria is invited to take up his residence anywhere in France, from the Mediterranean to the British channel. Already several thousand African laborers are at work in the coal fields of the north and the vineyards of the south. Handicapped by a low birth rate and high mortality statistics, the population of France no longer suffices to meet the demands for labor made upon it by increasing industrial development.

The satisfaction given by African labor in France has drawn attention to the vast national reservoir of labor which France has at her disposal in her colonies. Since 1910, when a few Algerian natives were taken on to the Courrières collieries and in the oil refineries at Marseille, the possibility of this solution has been seriously tested. The first batch of imported Kabyles having given good results they have been brought to France in increasing numbers, and there are now 7,000 or 8,000 scattered through the industrial and the wine-growing districts of the country. About 1,800 have found employment in Paris in the sugar refineries, tube railways and omnibus services.

The same will gain by substituting for the hundreds of thousands of German and Italian people the frontier French citizens, many of whom are trained soldiers. The millions of France which at present are taken out of the country by the Belgian, Italian and German workmen will be diverted to Algeria, and that this would be no small benefit to the colony is shown by the fact that in spite of the small number of Arabs at present in France nearly 350,000 were sent through one Algerian postoffice in six months by these laborers. The men will return to their villages with a new standard of consumption, and the general trade of France and Algeria will thus be benefited. A scheme for the establishment of a large Kabyle recruiting agency has been suggested to the colliery companies and other large employers of labor.

Counter-Case Against Dr. Mathers for Assault on Young Gaines Begun
Before Another Panel.

Judge Hathbun presided and the Gaines revelling case proceeded in the superior court Thursday afternoon.
The "gallery" was packed.

After the argument the court
charged the jury. The charge is revelling in a public place, a violation of a city ordinance. It is necessary to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt
—an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty. It is not necessary to prove such a disturbance as would
keep persons awake or interfere with
business; if profane and indecent
language was used in the hearing of
citizens it is presumed that they were
"annoyed" within the meaning of the
law. The law provides for the settling of grievances and men must not
take the law into their own hands.
Try this case alone and leave the
other to be considered separately.

At 2:52 Keeper Brooks led out the jury. The case of State vs. Howard A.
Mathers was at once called for trial.
Dr. Mathers appeared with Mr. Levy
for counsel and entered a plea of not guilty. Mr. Ham represented the state.

The following jurors were called:
William Thurston, Middletown; Carence H. Wrightington, Harry Williams, Michael Harrington, Newport;
Eugene Hart, Little Compton; Caleb
Harris, Newport; Charles Gifford,
Portsmouth; Frank J. Brady, Newport; George E. Snel, William L. Al-
my, Tiverton; George W. Peckham,
Jr., Jamestown; Oscar A. Willis, New Shoreham.

Mr. Ham explained that it was a case for assault on Douglas Gaines.
Mr. Thurston, relative of Dr.
Mathers, was excused on his own motion. Lampros Brown of Newport
was called. Mr. Harris was challenged and Ernest E. Hull of Jamestown
was called. Lampros Brown was challenged, and John F. Pierce of Little Compton was called. Mr. Willis
was appointed foreman.

Mr. Ham explained that, while it was a mix-up and perhaps there was
fault on both sides, the state claims
that defendant was angry and used
excessive force.

Douglas Gaines took the stand. He
and Thomas Lee Collins were in a mix-up on Mill street. Mr. Mansfield separated them. Lee struck witness
"with a number of stones" and witness
went at him again, when Dr. Mathers
struck witness on the jaw, rendering
him unconscious. Witness told Dr.
Mathers he would tell his father
(Stephen Gaines); Dr. Mathers said
he would do the same to him. Dr.
Mathers was still there when witness
recovered consciousness.

In cross-examination witness said
the boys were quarrelling on the street,
and were on Dr. Mathers' railing. Dr.
Mathers ordered them off. They went, and he went in the house. Later
arm, and was punching him with his right, a crowd gathering. Mansfield had then gone. (Witness illustrated on Mr. Levy how he held Lee.) Witness was mad and was full of fight.

Did not strike Dr. Mathers, or say a word to him; Mathers did not say a word to witness. Witness was in the gutter with his arms folded over his chest. Witness made no attempt to pick up rocks. Did not tell Dr. Mathers "I'll beat you" and strike him in the face. Witness pleaded guilty of revelling at this time and was convicted of an assault on Dr.
Mathers.

Henry Hawkins, a somewhat smaller colored boy, was the next witness. He too is 15 years old. Witness corroborated young Gaines as to the fight.
Dr. Mathers came out when he saw
the stones being thrown near his
house. Gaines lay in the street three or four minutes. Witness is a particular friend of young Gaines, but
never talked with him about the fight.
Gaines carried a pistol, which was granted a shooting gallery license at
his old place on Long wharf.

A resolution authorizing the city
treasurer to pay the claim of Mrs.
George S. Slocum for $11.26, for damage done to her fence, was passed.
A communication from W. D. Sayer, stating that he was a candidate to
take the birth census, was received.
The application of Harry D.
Coggeshall, for a pool table license
at "Louro street, was granted.

On report of approval by Alderman Hughes, John Donopoli was granted a shooting gallery license at
his old place on Long wharf.

A resolution was passed, authorizing
the city treasurer to pay for the Swinburne and Ash lands, required
for the widening of Bath road, on the
approval of the city solicitor.

A wagon, a wagon driver's and a
hack driver's licenses were granted.
The committee on the Coggeshall
School addition reported that it had received bids and examined plans from five local dealers. While his was not the lowest price, the committee
felt that it would be for the best interests of the city to purchase the plans offered by A. Cornette at $20,000 and to recommend the same.

The board passed a resolution awarding the contract to Mr. Cornette to supply the plans.

The committee on new police station reported a bid from Kerr Bros.
to provide set and built a fire station on the new station, which shall be 25 feet above the roof and six feet below, for $52,500. It recommended the award of the contract and the board
took the action necessary for the award.

Eight bids were opened for the fire department re-organization bonds and
the award was made to Blake Bros. &
Co. of Boston, the highest bidders, at $100.23. The Sinking Fund Commission offered to take them at par and paying for this privilege
around $3,000,000. Seven out of every 19 of these ships flew the British flag.
England has dominated the canal ever since the khedive, in 1875, sold his 17,500 shares for $20,000,000 to
the British government. These shares
are now worth close to $200,000,000.

THE FIRST SUEZ CANAL.

Count Ferdinand de Lesseps
More Successful Than at Panama.

That the Suez canal, figuring so
prominently in the military operations
to which Turkey is a party, is not the
first canal that joined the Red sea
with the Mediterranean is briefly told
in a statement prepared for the press
by the National Geographic Society:

"From the morning of history the
west has sought to break into the east
by way of Suez. Somewhere during the years 1550-1200 B. C. the Egyptians, under Seti I and Rameses II,
joined the Nile, by way of Lake Timsah, to the Red sea, thus opening a waterway the advantage of the present
canal from the Mediterranean,
over the Suez isthmus, to the orient.
This canal was choked up by sand in
the course of ages.

"Necho, about 600 B. C., began a canal from ancient Bubastis, and Darius Hystaspis, 500 years later, completed the work, once more bringing
the Red sea and Nile together. Although nearly choked up by the beginning of the Christian era, it was navigable to a degree as late as the battle
of Actium, and some of Cleopatra's
ships escaped this way to the Red sea.

"Trajan restored the canal. It fell into disuse and choked up again. Am-
ru, the Islamic conqueror of Egypt,
restored it for the last time in the seventh century, connecting Cairo with
the Red sea. Napoleon caused the old
route to be surveyed, but was forced to drop the project. After him, Metternich, the great reactionary, prime minister of Austria-Hungary, stimulated a Suez commission in 1847. Nothing, however, came of it.

"As the world well knows, the Suez canal was built by the man who failed
to build the Panama canal, Count
Ferdinand de Lesseps. Its original
depth was 24 1/2 feet, and its bottom
width 72 feet. It could accommodate ships of 41 feet deep and 200 feet wide at its narrowest bottom point. At Panama, the work at Suez was extended
so as to ultimately give a bottom width
of 154 1/2 feet and a depth of 36
and 1-1/2 feet. It was expected that this enlargement would be complete by
next year, but the war has interrupted operations.

"How much larger than the average demands for a canal the Panama
waterway has been made is strikingly
shown by a statement from Suez to
the effect that only one per cent
of the ships seeking passage by that
route have a draft of 25 feet.

"In 1859 19 vessels passed through the Suez canal. In 1912, 3,373 ships
steamed through of 20,775,120 net tonnage, and paying for this privilege
around $3,000,000. Seven out of every 19 of these ships flew the British flag.
England has dominated the canal ever
since the khedive, in 1875, sold his 17,500 shares for $20,000,000 to

MORGAN WINS BEACH CASE.
Oyster Bay Loses Long Fight
for Property on Long Island Sound.

After defending title to East Beach
under an ancient patent, in the courts
for 11 years, the town of Oyster Bay
has lost in the court of appeals to J.
P. Morgan, who receives absolute title to the property.

The beach is one of the finest on
the Long Island Sound shore. It extends from Peacock point for a mile
along the Sound, and adjoins Mr.
Morgan's country estate on East Island.
The Morgan estate is one of the show
places on the north shore. It consists of 25 acres.

The beach has been used for years
by the people of Oyster Bay township Cottages and bungalows have been erected on the beach during recent years. These, it is believed, will have to be removed.

great advantages the parcel post
gives you! Grab them yourself while the others are standing around wondering what to do.
The parcel post isn't meant to

WAS INTENDED TO HELP
THE SMALL MERCHANT
AND THE CONSUMER—THE BUYING PUBLIC.

Every small merchant's store
is now the geographical center
of a district extending fifty miles in every direction, wherein he can ship goods more cheaply and quickly than any one else.
He has now a bigger field for trade than ever before. Once he realizes this fact he should not be slow to take advantage of it.
The merchant who starts at once to make himself known to his bigger public will necessarily reap the biggest reward.

GAINES JURY DISAGREES.

Foreman at One Time Reports Hope,
But Obligated Finally to Give It up.

Counter-Case Against Dr. Mathers for Assault on Young Gaines Begun
Before Another Panel.

Judge Rathbun presided and the Gaines case proceeded in the superior court Thursday afternoon.
The "gallery" was packed.

After the argument the court
charged the jury. The charge is revealing in a public face, a violation of a city ordinance. It is necessary to
prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt
—"an abiding conviction, to a moral
certainty." It is not necessary to
prove such a disturbance as would
keep persons awake or interfere with
business; if profane and indecent
language was used in the hearing of
citizens it is presumed that they were
"annoyed" within the meaning of the
law. The law provides for the settling of grievances and men must not
take the law into their own hands.
Try this case alone and leave the
other to be considered separately.

At 2:52 Keeper Brooks led out the jury.

The case of State vs. Howard A.
Mathers was at once called for trial.
Mr. Mathers appeared with Mr. Levy
for counsel and entered a plea of not guilty. Mr. Hann represented the state.

The following jurors were called:
William Thurston, Middleborough; Gar-rence H. Wrightington, Harry Williams, Michael Harrington, Newport;
Eugene Hart, Little Compton; Caleb
Harris, Newport; Charles Gifford,
Portsmouth; Frank J. Brady, Newport; George E. Small, William L. Al-
my, Tiverton; George W. Peckham,
Jr., Jamestown; Oscar A. Willis, New
Shoreham.

Mr. Hann explained that it was a case for assault on Douglas Gaines.
Mr. Thurston, a relative of Dr.
Mathers, was excused on his own motion. Lampson Brown of Newport
was called. Mr. Harris was challenged and Ernest E. Hull of Jamestown
was called. Lampson Brown was challenged, and John F. Pierce of Little Compton was called. Mr. Willis
was appointed foreman.

Mr. Hann explained that while it
was a mix-up and perhaps there was
fault on both sides, the state claims
that defendant was angry and used
excessive force.

Douglas Gaines took the stand. He
and Thomas Lee Collins were in a mix-up on Mill street. Mr. Mathers
separated them. Lee struck witness
"with a number of stones" and witness
went at him again, when Dr. Mathers
struck witness on the jaw, rendering
him unconscious. Witness told Dr.
Mathers he would tell his father
(Stephen Gaines); Dr. Mathers said
he would do the same to him. Dr.
Mathers was still there when witness
recovered consciousness.

In cross-examination witness said
the boys were quarrelling on the street,
and were on Dr. Mathers' railing. Dr.
Mathers ordered them off. They
arm, and was punching him, with his right arm, and witness made no attempt to pick up Collins. Did not tell Dr. Mathers "I'll beat you" and struck him in the face. Witness pleaded guilty of revelling at this time and was also convicted of an assault on Dr. Mathers.

Henry Hawkins, a somewhat smaller colored boy, was the witness. He too is 15 years old. Witness corroborated young Gaines as to the fight.
Dr. Mathers came out, when he saw
the stones being thrown near his
house. Gaines lay in the street three
or four minutes. Witness is a particular friend of young Gaines, but
never talked with him about the fight.
Gaines carried papers on his wrist
the afternoon after the fight. When defendant struck Gaines, Gaines fell right down on his right side. Dr.
Mathers stood over Gaines with a smile on his face. Witness did not see Gaines strike Dr. Mathers.

William Hays, aged 15, somewhat smaller, testified. Dr. Mathers slapped Gaines as the latter was giving Lee
"under cuts." After Gaines lay in while in the gutter he arose (witness does not know whether he was unconscious or not) and said he would get his father.

At 4:42 the court responded the trial until 10:30 a. m. Friday.

He then sent for the jury in the Gaines case and soon Senator Murphy led in the 12 solid looking men. Forman Murphy said they had tried hard to agree; he would like 30 minutes
more, as he thought it a very close settle in case like this. He thought they were very near a verdict. The court asked the jurors if they were depending on the 5:05 train and if they thought it worth while to go back and consider further. Mr. Hann thought it rather embarrassing to question the jurors, and the court called them away if they desired more time.
They retired.

It was rumored in the courtroom
that the jury stood largely in favor of acquittal.

The jury in the Gaines case, at 5:50, retired to the courtroom, where they discussed the case and were discharged
from further consideration of the case.

PIANO FOR COGGESHALL SCHOOL.

Fire Department Re-Organization Bonds
Bought by Blake Bros. & Co.

The Aldermen Also Authorize Payment for Bath Road Land and Approve Weekly Bills.

The Board of Aldermen during a 20-minute session Thursday evening approved the weekly bills; authorized payment for land taken for the widening of Bath road, accepted a bid for bonds for the re-organization of the fire department, bought a piano for the Coggeshall school, and attended to several matters of detail.

The bills approved and authorized to be paid were as follows: Pay roll, street department, $380.29; police department, $104.43; fire department, $510.24; city officers, $199.48; firemen
in theaters, $92; Hector M. Henry, for $445.34, $332.25 and $251.19, highways and bridges; George E. Cozzens and A. R. C. Gaizenmeier, $174, playgrounds; James J. Dugan, $8.17, ambulance; M. McCall, $77.30, Coggeshall school.

A resolution authorizing the city
treasurer to pay the claim of Mrs.
George S. Sloman, was passed. While damage done to her fence, was assessed.
A communication from W. D. Sargent,
stating that he was a candidate to
take the birth census, was received.

The application of Harry D.
Coggeshall, for a pool table license at his home, was granted.

On a report of approval by Alderman Hughes, John Dantopolis was granted a shooting gallery license at
his old place on Long wharf.

A resolution was passed, authorizing
the city treasurer to pay for the Sewerburn and Ash lands, required
for the widening of Bath road, on the
approval of the city solicitor.

A wagon, a wagon driver's and a
hack drivers license were granted.

The committee on the Coggeshall
School addition reported that it had received bids and examined plans from five local dealers. While his was not the lowest price, the committee
felt that it would be for the best interests of the city to purchase the plans offered by A. K. Connette at $275, and they so recommended. The Board passed a resolution awarding the contract to Mr. Connette to supply the piano.

The committee on new police station reported a bid from Kerr Bros.
to provide, set and fully rig a flagpole on the new station, which shall
be 35 feet above the roof and six feet
below, for $52.51 recommended the
award of the contract and the board
took the action necessary for the
award.

Eight bids were opened for the fire
department re-organization bonds and
the award was made to Blake Bros. &
Co. of Boston, the highest bidders, at $102.23. The Sinking Fund Commission offered to take them at par and
the Plainfield Trust Company of New York bid for half of one bond, for $5,000 worth. The other bids were for the entire amount as called for, and provided for premiums. They were:
Estabrook Sons, $100.07; Curtis &
Sinker, $100.14; R. L. Day, $100.07;
Jackson & Curtis, $100.09; Florence
& Co., $100.23; Sinking Fund Commission, $100; Blake Bros. & Co., $100.23; Plainfield Trust, $5,000 for one note.

Alderman Hughes reported that architect Weaver had appeared before the School Committee and that they were pleased with the plan for the new John Clarke Memorial School and approved them except for certain changes—teachers' retiring room, vertical swing windows, different bookcases and increased height in the assembly hall. He said the aldermanic committee realized that it was pretty hard to change the plans, but taking into consideration the fact that they were asked for by the School Committee, it seemed advisable to grant the request. They involve some changes in the plans as well as the specifications, and while it had been hoped to be prepared at this meeting to arrange for the advertising of bids it would be impossible to do so until next week.
There was no objection to the report of the committee and the schoolhouse
business goes over to next week, and in the meantime the committee will consider further the specifications.

THE FIRST SUEZ CANAL.

Count Ferdinand de Lesseps
More Successful Than at Panama.

That the Suez canal, figuring so
prominently in the military operations
to which Turkey is a party, is not the
first canal that joined the Red sea
with the Mediterranean is briefly told
in a statement prepared for the press
by the National Geographic Society:

"From the morning of history the
west has sought to break into the east
by way of Suez. Somewhere during
the years 1250-1300 B. C. the Egyptians, under Seti I and Rameses II,
joined the Nile, by way of Lake Thyn-
sah, to the Red sea, thus opening a
waterway the advantage of the present
canal from the Mediterranean
over the Suez isthmus to the Orient.
This canal was choked up by sand in
the course of ages.

"Necho, about 600 B. C., began a canal from ancient Bubastis, and Dar-
ius Hystaspis, 500 years later, completed the work, once more bringing
the Red sea and Nile together. Although nearly choked up by the beginning of the Christian era, it was reopened to a degree as late as the battle
of Actium, and some of Cleopatra's
ships escaped this way to the Red
sea.

"Trajan restored the canal. It fell into disuse and choked up again. Am-
ru, the Islamic conqueror of Egypt,
restored it for the last time in the
seventh century, connecting Cairo with
the Red sea. Napoleon caused the old
route to be surveyed, but was forced to
drop the project. After him, Met-
ternich, the great reactionary, prime
minister of Austria-Hungary, stimu-
lated a Suez commission in 1847. Nothing, however, came of it.

"The world well knows, the Suez
canal was built by the man who failed
to build the Panama canal, Count
Ferdinand de Lesseps. Its original
depth was 24 feet, and its bottom
width 72 feet. It could accommodate ships of 217-12 feet, but it was in operation 11 years, beginning in 1869,
before vessels of such draft sought passage.

"By 1860 its depth had been increased 23 feet, and when the United States announced its intention to make a caanal 41 feet deep and 300 feet wide at
its narrowest bottom point, at Panama, the work at Suez was extended
so as to ultimately give a bottom width
of 131 feet and a depth of 36
and 41 feet. It was expected that this enlargement would be complete by
next year, but the war has interrupted operations.

"How much larger than the average demands for a canal the Panama
waterway has been made is strikingly
shown by a statement from Suez to
the effect that only one per cent
of the ships seeking passage by that
route have a draft of 28 feet.

"In 1859 10 vessels passed through
the Suez canal. In 1912, 5,373 ships
steamed through, of 20,755,120 net tonnage, and paying for this privilege
around $35,000,000. Seven out of every 10 of these ships flew the British flag.
England has dominated the canal over
since the khedive. In 1875, sold his 175,000 canal shares for $20,000,000 to
are now worth close to $200,000,000."

for 11 years, the town of Oyster Bay
has lost in the court of appeals to J.

the Long Island Sound shore. It
extends from Peacock point for a mile
along the Sound, and adjoins Mr.
Morgan's country estate on East Island.

of 65 acres.

The beach has been used for years
by the people of Oyster Bay township
Coaches and bungalows have been

WHY SOLDIERS DREAD SLEEP.

Wounded Have Terrible Nightmares and Persist in Marching all Night.

American Girl, Nursing in Aix-les-Bains Hospital, Sees Atrocities of the War.

(New York Evening Post.)
She had just come back from nursing the wounded at Aix-les-Bains, and I, teacup in hand, made the banal remark:

"How they must look forward to sleep."
"Look forward to sleep?" the girl shot back. "It's the thing many of them dread most. They have terrible nightmares. They dream of the things they saw in the trenches. And then there's the marching."

"Marching?" said I, not understanding just what she meant.
"Yes," she replied. "They get out of bed in the night and march. We tried everything to soothe them, but it didn't do any good. So we padded up one of the rooms downstairs, so that they wouldn't hurt themselves, and just let them march all night. They were a little out of their heads, you know."

One night beneath the window, behind the table, where men in cutaways and top hats passing up and down the avenue on their usual round of Sunday afternoon calls. Yet, of course, there was no real reason in the world why they shouldn't. This girl, a member of a well-known American family, was in Aix when the war broke out. She was then with her mother, who had been taking the cure. When war was declared, they decided to stay and do what they could to help the townsfolk take care of the wounded. Her mother went to work at one emergency hospital, she at another, first as kitchen-helper. She did not stay at that job long. All she had ever done in the way of nursing was to take care of a sister who had an ulcerated tooth, but she soon found herself in charge of a ward with 10 beds in it. The oldest wounded soldier at any time under her care was 23.

"What about the atrocities?" I asked. "Did you see any children with their hands cut off?"
"No, not with their hands cut off," she replied. "But with their fingers cut off. I saw children maimed that way. There were other terrible sights on those trains of refugees, cut-groes, as they call them. Those trains were the most horrible things of all. The atrocities were not all on one side."

There was a friendly rivalry between the two hospitals, and mother and daughter used to compare notes on their different charges.

"One day mother came in and said they had a pretty strenuous day in her hospital," she said. "I asked her what had happened."
"Why, there was a Turco among the wounded today," she said, "and he brought a string of ears into the hospital with him. Of course, we took them away from him. As soon as we did that he cried out: 'I have taken from him his treasured possession.'"

"What is the use of coming up here to fight if I can't bring any trophies home with me?" he said.
This parallels the story, which the censor let through some time ago about the Turco who carried a human head into a hospital.

Anesthetic was almost as precious as radium, and the store of it in Aix was jealously guarded. It was used only for major operations, amputations and the like. This made the suffering all the more general, and all the more acute.

But there was one effect of the war which was an aid to speedy convalescence. The men, almost without exception, wanted to get well, they were anxious to get back into the fighting at the earliest possible moment. This made them the more ready to obey the orders of the doctor, and at the same time gave a direct psychological impetus to recovery.

With the families of the wounded men it was sometimes different. The mother of one boy, who had spent a year in the hospital, having a wound in his hand attended to, came on to Aix fondly hoping to take her son home for an indefinite period of convalescence. The day she arrived, he received a telegram from the front telling him to report back for duty at once.

One day the American girl was down at the railroad station in charge of the refreshment table booth that every village in France has to furnish for the relief of the refugees and wounded as they pass through on the long trains. She heard a commotion on the platform and running out, saw two peasants being pulled and dragged and shoved along by a soldier's mob. She asked the station agent what was the matter, and he replied: "They are two German spies who were found on the train. They are going to be taken across the street and shot."

As the two men were hauled past her she caught a few words in broken French, with what she recognized as a strong German accent. Just then the chief military officer of the town came up and took charge. Later the girl learned that the two prisoners were not German spies, but peasants from Alsace, who had run away from the German conscription. They were not executed.

Families of patients in the hospital came scores of miles to see their wounded sons and brothers and sisters. The family of one wounded peasant arrived one day in a big farm wagon. They brought with them baskets full of delicacies for their hero, delicacies not at all common on the menu of a sick soldier. He insisted—this was the universal practice among the wounded, on dividing all the stuff among all the patients in the hospital. He would have done the same if his offering had been a single cake of chocolate.

When it came time for the family to leave, the mother of the wounded man came up to the American girl and held out two silver francs in her hand. "We owe you much," she said. "For our means are small—very small indeed now, with my sons at war. We wish we could offer you more, but it is all we have."

BOYS AND THE NATION.

Strategic Importance of Training Future Citizens in Idealism.

(New York Evening Post.)
Boys are what really matter to a nation, said John B. Mott in an address on "The Strategic Importance of Work with Boys," in behalf of the Boys' Work Department of the Young Men's Christian Association, in a strong presentation of the argument for training boys in idealism, as the future moorings of the state, he said, in part:

"Any nation that wishes to have a strong and united front must first lay hold of the boy, the child, the ambitious boys, the boys of vision. There is no more direct way to accomplish the solution of the most difficult problems which press upon the nation than to dominate the boys, the hope of the race, with right ideas and visions. The boys have the power 'to let' abounding in physical vitality, having the many unspent years, they constitute incomparably our most valuable asset. Moreover, they are so susceptible to impressions.

"The age of youth is the age of laying the secure foundation; the vision forming age, the age in which ideals are fixed, that dominate; the age in which we rivet upon ourselves the habits that make us or undo us; the habits that enable a man to pass through the cross currents and the undertow of the modern age; or the habits that result in disintegration and actual collapse.

"The age of boyhood is the age that determines the future. What is the hope of the greatness of any nation? What is the secret of the greatness of any people? What makes a nation great is the character, the ideals and the spirit of the people, and history shows that character is determined in youth; that those ideals are placed high then, that that spirit is determined likewise by what happens with the ideals.

"When I see the forces of sin and shame, which are working such frightful havoc on every hand; when I see the magnitude of these forces and note their zealous activity, their selfishness and their infinite inequality, I do not wonder at what I find in every nation, ever in my own country, in the way of the wreckage of the boys. The most visible thing about us in America is our material civilization. I find that men are increasingly intent on what they can see, hear and handle; and the boys are tremendously impressed by it. This action must be away from our moral idealism. If we are to do it, we must give the future leaders visions at the time when men receive visions that stay with them. It is our ideals, it is that, that determine the other things."

SHIPMENT OF MONEY.

The United States Treasury May Utilize the Parcel Post in Future.

The parcel post may be utilized in the shipment of money between the United States Treasury and banks in the future, if the Secretary of the treasury decides to follow a ruling made by George F. Downey, controller of the Treasury. Should this plan be adopted, and Controller Downey holds here is no legal prohibition of such method of shipment, the express companies, which heretofore have monopolized the shipment of funds between the Treasury and the banks, will be deprived of a large part of their remaining revenues.

The termination of a 23-year contract between the Treasury Department and the United States Express Company, by reason of the company's retirement from business, made it necessary to enter into other contracts for the transportation of money from the Treasury to banks and from banks to the Treasury. Assistant Secretary Maiburn of the department questioned Controller Downey as to the possibility of using the parcel post for such transportation, the controller ruling as stated.

Shortly after the retirement of the United States Express Company from business, bids were asked for the handling of this portion of the Treasury's business. In a letter of inquiry to Controller Downey, Mr. Maiburn stated that the bids received were all so high that he felt it his duty to reject them.

Annual expenditures for the transportation of money, part of which is reimbursable from national banks, are about $3,000,000. The Treasury estimates that the heavy shipments this year, due to extraordinary issue of emergency currency and the new federal reserve system, will largely increase this expense.

Assistant Secretary Maiburn pointed out that the cost of a recent shipment of $50,000,000 from the Philadelphia mint to the New York sub-treasury by parcel post, cost only $1,275.18, while under the old express contract the cost of transportation would have been $25,000.

In handling these shipments at the higher rate the express contract has assumed all risks and has insured delivery of money. Since the Postoffice Department does not insure, it will be necessary to safeguard the shipments by parcel post with a reasonable insurance. The insurance charges are so small that, added to the postage, in lieu of transportation charges, both together except in cases of very long hauls, in the opinion of Assistant Secretary Maiburn, are much less than express charges would be.

Consideration of the best method for transportation of money and securities by no means near determination, in view of the fact that the parcel post is available and that the government has authority to insure shipments by that means, it is possible that the express companies will desire to re-adjust their bids for the business.

FRENCH LOSSES IN WAR.

The Dead Estimated at About 100,000 and the Wounded at 400,000.

The French war office does not issue lists of losses in the war. A correspondent, by inquiry in various quarters, estimates that the French loss in dead up to November 19 was under 100,000 men. The number of wounded and sick soldiers who were being cared for in French hospitals November 19 appeared to have been about 400,000. The Swiss government's Bureau for the exchange of prisoners of war has the names of 50,000 French prisoners in Germany. Taking these figures together the total losses of the French army would be about 500,000 men.

The French military authorities, through their agents and spies, are well informed as to the situation of the German army. The French estimate the number of German killed in battle on this front as considerably more than 100,000, because the German tactics have been more continuously on the offensive, with correspondingly heavier losses than the defensive. The French military administration does not share the popular view that the German losses have been enormously in excess of those of the French. Neither is any credence given to the reports of bad provisioning of the German army and of soldiers famished and driven by overwork to exhaustion. French commanders have killed thousands on those subjects. They find German prisoners defiant and confident, and there is no indication of starvation except under circumstances where they have been cut off from the main bodies of German troops.

Good work on the part of the leading Southwesterns in the Recreation League at the Young Men's Christian Association Thursday evening sent them forging to the front with a comfortable lead of four points. They now have 14 points, while the Northerners are second with 10. The Blizzards and the Monsoons have three points each, the Whirlwinds three, while the Hurricanes have yet to score a point.

The Southwesterns started their winning in volleyball ball defeating the Blizzards in a close game, 11-8. The Whirlwinds beat the Hurricanes, 11-7, and the Northerners defeated the Monsoons, 11-6. The Blizzards ran the leading Southwesterns a dead heat in the first of the 250-yard relay, and in the run-off the Southwesterns won by a yard. The Southwesterns were also victorious over the Blizzards in the 500-yard relay. The Northerners kept the Monsoons from climbing up to second place in both the 250-yard and the 500-yard relays.

An effort is being made to establish Association records every week, and the natatorium was the scene of the trials Thursday evening, when the event was the plunge for distance. "Freely" Coggeshall of the Southwesterns was first with 37 feet, while Albert Leysath had 33 feet to his credit. Frank Jennings and Eugene Bloomberg of the same team being tied for third with 25 feet each. Christopher Fickham was high for the Monsoons with 33 feet, and they finished the run-off the Southwesterns being third, and the Blizzards fourth.

Bowling in the Employed Boys' League resulted in victories for Harvard over Princeton. Brown over Dartmouth, and Princeton over Yale. In quoits Harvard defeated Princeton, and Brown won over Dartmouth. Brown and Harvard triumphed over the same two teams in pocket billiards.

In the High School Boys' League in the afternoon the Dodgers beat the Giants at basket ball 18-5, the feature being Anderson's scoring of 16 points for the winners. The Pirates then beat the Giants, 6-4, and the Red Sox defeated the Braves, 8-3. The Pirates won the plunge for distance.

"The Standpatter" was the subject for discussion before the Life Problem Club among the men at the Association Thursday evening, when Rev. C. E. Shook led the talk. He defined a standpatter as distinguished from a free thinker, and declared that both are necessary to life. Previous to the discussion a bean supper was served in the banquet hall.

The discussion clubs among the employed boys and high school boys also held their meetings, under Boys' Work Secretary Stokes.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors Dr. Norman M. MacLeod, chairman of the athletic committee, reported that the water in the swimming tank is pure, as the result of investigations by Mr. Albert Sweet, the Water Works chemist.

A RUSH FOR SEALS.

Red Cross Buttons to be Given Those Selling a Certain Number.

There was a rush for the Christmas Red Cross seals this morning which fairly overwhelmed Miss Akery and others in charge of their distribution. The demand creating almost a panic in the office. In all there were nine orders, including seven schools, and in giving these 6,100 seals were sent out.

In one of the public schools, in which in former years there was no interest, there is this year a very considerable demand, and Miss Akery is beginning to fear that her supply will be exhausted.

The sale at the postoffice will be started Saturday if the arrangements can be completed in time. For those who sell between 100 and 250 Red Cross buttons will be given, and for those selling 250 or more a button specially designed with the present year's seal.

POLICE NEWS.

A man was turned over to the police this morning from the steamer "Providence," for evading his fare. When the police took him he was not so positive that he was not going to pay, and at the station he had the charge against him wiped out by paying the money which the steamer officials failed in their efforts to collect.

A man was before the court this morning who was adjudged to be insane and was accordingly committed to the asylum.

The police have taken into custody an old offender who was trying to sell two live hens. He was drunk at the time and was unable to tell just where he procured the fowls, except that it was out on the island. The man has been arrested before for hen stealing.

"Out on the island" and the police would like to know where the fowls came from, so they may bring a charge against him.

Winter caps for the special officers, who are having more work this year than usual in cold weather, because of the additional days off for the regular men, have arrived. They come all the way from Kalamazoo, Mich.

Good work on the part of the leading Southwesterns in the Recreation League at the Young Men's Christian Association Thursday evening sent them forging to the front with a comfortable lead of four points. They now have 14 points, while the Northeasterns are second with 10. The Blizzards and the Monsoons have six points each, the Whirlwinds three, while the Hurricanes have yet to score a point.

The Southwesterns started their winning in the Valley ball, defeating the Blizzards in a close game, 11-8. The Whirlwinds beat the Hurricanes, 11-7, and the Northeasters defeated the Monsoons, 11-6. The Blizzards ran the leading Southwesterns a dead heat in the first of the 250-yard relays, and in the run-off the Southwesterns won by a 2-1 margin.

The Southwesterns were also victorious over the Blizzards in the 500-yard relay. The Northeasters kept the Monsoons from climbing by beating them in both the 250-yard and the 500-yard relays.

An effort is being made to establish Association records very week, and the material was the scene of the trials Thursday evening, when the event was the plunge for distance.

"Free" Coggeshall of the Southwesterns was first with 37 feet, while Albert Leyshon had 33 feet to his credit. Frank Jennings and Eugene Blomberg of the same team being tied for third with 25 feet each. Christopher Peckham was high for the Monsoons with 35 feet, and they finished second, the Northeasters being third, and the Blizzards fourth.

Bowling in the Employed Boys' League resulted in victories for Harvard over Princeton, Brown over Dartmouth, and Princeton over Yale. In quito Harvard defeated Princeton, and Brown won over Dartmouth. Brown and Harvard triumphed over the same two teams in pocket billiards.

In the High School Boys' League in the afternoon the Dodgers beat the Giants 11-5, the feature being Anderson's scoring of 15 points for the winners. The Pirates then beat the Giants, 8-4, and the Red Sox defeated the Braves, 5-3. The Pirates won the plunge for distance.

"The Standpatter" was the subject for discussion before the Life Problem Club among the men at the Association Thursday evening. When Rev. C. E. Slocum led the talk. He defined a standpatter as distinguished from a free thinker, and declared that both are necessary to life. Previous to the discussion a banquet supper was served in the banquet hall.

The discussion clubs among the employed boys and high school boys also held their meetings under Boys' Work Secretary Stokes.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the North American League, chairman of the athletic committee, reported that the water in the swimming tank is pure, as the result of investigations by Mr. Albert Sweet, the Water Works chemist.

A RUSH FOR SEALS.

Red Cross Buttons to be Given Those Selling a Certain Number.

There was a rush for the Christmas Red Cross seals this morning which fairly overwhelmed Miss Akersley and others in charge of their distribution, the demand creating almost a panic in the office. In all there were nine orders, including seven schools, and in filling these 5,100 seals were sent out. In one of the public schools, in which in former years there was no interest, there is this year a very considerable demand, and Miss Akersley is beginning to fear that her supply will be exhausted.

The sale at the postoffice will be started Saturday if the arrangements can be completed in time. For those who sell between 100 and 250 Red Cross buttons will be given, and for those selling 500 or more a button especially designed with the present year's seal.

POLICE NEWS.

A man was turned over to the police this morning from steamer Providence, for evading his fare. When the police took him he was not so positive that he was not going to pay, and at the station he had the charge against him wiped out by paying the money.

A man was before the court this morning who was adjudged to be insane and was accordingly committed to the asylum.

The police have taken into custody an old offender who was trying to sell two live hens. He was drunk at the time and was unable to tell just where he procured the fowls, except that it was out on the island. The man has been arrested before for hen stealing "out on the island," and the police would like to know where the fowls came from, so they may bring a case against him.

Winter caps for the special officers, who are having more work this year than usual in cold weather, because of the additional days off for the regular men, have arrived. They come all the way from Kalamazoo, Mich.

"OUT OF DARKNESS."
Oratorio Society to Present Gounod's Psalm CXXX in Its Original Form.

Gounod is no stranger to Newport audiences, and the Oratorio Society should certainly know how to interpret him. Next Thursday evening, for the fifth time, his name will appear on the Society's program, when his Psalm CXXX, for baritone solo, quartet, chorus and orchestra, will be given in its original form. Not a great oratorio, like "The Redemption," given April 17, 1913, nor a motet like the "Gallia," given at the Society's concert, December 7, 1911, "Out of Darkness" is a cantata of 44 pages, requiring about half an hour for its performance.

The cantata is divided into four parts. The opening movement, adagio, is called "The O Lord, Lord, my God, I pray Thee, hear my crying, seems like a call of despair. It is sung by the chorus, and is followed by a quartet for solo voices: "There is mercy with Thee, O Lord, with Thee is mercy, therefore shalt Thou be feared." The quartet, one of great beauty, is sung by Mrs. Mary Curley-Rooney, Mrs. Sarah Bailey-King, Dr. H. H. Luther and Mr. George Herbert Patterson.

The third movement is an allegro movement for the chorus: "From the watch of the morning, even until evening, trust thou, Israel, in God, the Lord giving assurance that 'with Him is mercy and plentiful redemption.' This movement is full of contrast, and rises to a climax of great confidence.

The concluding "And He shall redeem thee, Israel," begins with a baritone recitative, leading into a chorus with baritone solo and choir. After other declamations "He shall redeem thee, Israel," from all three iniquities. Throughout the cantata the instrumentation is a fitting setting for the English words as adapted by Rev. J. T. Peckham, D. D., and the orchestration is masterly.

WILLIAM DEHON KING

Former Newporter Dies Thursday in Boston at an Advanced Age.

Member of Family Connected With City's Public Life, Hints Interested in Her Welfare.

Mr. William Dehon King, a former Newporter and a member of the King family which has been connected for many years with public life in this city, died Thursday in Boston at an advanced age, and the body will be brought here for interment in the Island cemetery. He was grandson of the elder David King, one of the most prominent physicians in Newport in the early part of the last century, and the eldest son of the late David King, who followed his father in the practice of medicine and was one of the leading citizens in the latter part of the century.

Born in Newport, in the King home-stead on Pelham street, after graduating from college in 1859 he went to China, where he engaged in business with his uncle, the late William H. King. Upon his retirement he returned to Newport and for a time occupied the residence on Narragansett avenue which he owned at the time of his death. He had, however, spent his latter days at Manomet, Mass., making frequent visits to Newport.

Mr. King was a graduate of Brown University, of which institution also his grandfather, his father and three of his uncles were alumni. He was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati in the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, taking his membership from a great-grand-uncle, Captain Zebulon King of the Fourth Massachusetts Continental Infantry, an original member of the society. Mr. King for a number of years was treasurer of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and he was also on its annual meeting held in this city.

The deceased was deeply interested in the Newport Historical Society and never failed to visit its rooms when he came to Newport. On one of his last calls there, in June, 1911, he presented to the librarian, to be kept in the society's rooms, the old watch which his grandfather and his father had carried. This was purchased by the elder Dr. King of an English sea captain in 1800, and was carried by him until his death in 1736. It was then carried by the younger Dr. King until the latter's death in 1822, and descended to Mr. William Dehon King, the eldest son, who carried it until he presented it to the historical society.

Mr. King was the eldest of a family of three sons and four daughters. His brothers were T. Walter King, who died soon after the battle of Bull Run in the Civil war, and William King, who was wounded and killed in the Spanish war. Two sisters, Mrs. William H. Brockhead and Miss George A. King, survive. Mr. George Brockhead King of this city and Mrs. L. B. McCagge are cousins, and the late George Gordon King, Edward King and William H. King were his uncles.

The elder Dr. King was married Ann, daughter of General James Wheaton, and the younger Dr. King married Sarah Gordon, daughter of Rev. Salmon Wheaton, D. D., at one time rector of Trinity Church.

Dear Sir, It will be of interest to the people of Newport who are working for the British-American War Relief Committee to hear that Lady Herbert, the president of the committee, has received a personal cable from Lord Kitchener stating that the contributions of gifts for the British on active service had been received with much appreciation and gratitude. FIREMEN'S PROBLEMS.

Many Seeking an Opinion on Various Points Which Interest Them.

Who Shall be Call Men and Permanent Men Under Re-Organization Mooted Questions.

Much studying of the fire department re-organization plan is now being done; in fact, there would seem to be more of this by the firemen and those who would like to be firemen than before the election, and many are seeking an opinion on various points which interest them. Who can be a permanent man in the new department and who can be a call man seem to be the questions most frequently asked just at present.

The recommended plan of re-organization says that "all officers in the department shall be selected from the permanent men." The officers are named as chief, deputy chief, three captains, chief electrician and mechanical. It is further specified the present permanent foremen shall be designated as captains and one additional shall be elected by the Representative Council, on recommendation of the chief. The present foremen are Thomas W. Wood of Combination 1, and Eugene S. Hughes of Combination 2. Foreman Hughes is an announced candidate for deputy chief and Foreman Wood has been mentioned for the post of electrician.

At headquarters there has been a sort of dual foremanship. John H. Malloy, the dean of the headquarters force, has acted as wagon foreman and Foreman Wood as house foreman, while Malloy has received extra pay for long service and valuable experience. Mr. Wood has had charge of the fire alarm, and Mr. Malloy of the alarm outside, so that both have been of the same relative rank, though not given in the City Manual. The mechanic in the report says, shall be selected from the incoming permanent men, but it is stipulated that he shall operate the pump at headquarters in addition to having charge of all the department apparatus. The report says the candidates shall have had not less than three years practical experience in general automobile construction and repair. Since Steamers 4 and 5 are to be held in reserve, it is supposed that this official must have practical knowledge as to the running of steam fire engines. Along this line of argument it is claimed that Engineer Joseph Brown of Steamer 1 is the logical candidate, being proven a steam engineer by keeping that old piece of apparatus alive, being an automobile man from both a business and a pleasure standpoint, and being a general mechanic by trade. In addition, it is pointed out that he has the advantage by being under 30 years of age. Mr. Brown has not declared that he desires the position.

The chief and deputy chief, it will be noted, are enumerated as officers, and also under the heading "permanent force." While in the case of the officers previously referred to it is specifically stated how they shall be made, there is nothing to show whether the present chief holds over in the re-organization plan, or from what material he shall be chosen, if he is to be elected, or for how long. The report does say, though, that officers shall be retired at the age of 65 years, but that this provision shall not apply to the chief or deputy chief. It provides that the deputy chief shall be elected for four years by the Representative Council. The proposition as voted by the taxpayers says that any or all the recommendations of the committee shall be carried out by the Board of Aldermen under the direction of the Representative Council, and that is one of the cases which will need to be straitened out in putting the plan into use.

Who shall be the call men under the re-organization is a question which some do not find at all clear, as the report is not exactly definite. Yet it can be seen that it was the intention of the committee to give the new call force and location over to the permanent members at present serving, in that capacity, to be "selected according to age, occupation and the location of their residence. The report also says: "All call men added to the department in the future shall not be less than 21 years of age and shall pass both physical and mental examinations." It is taken that the present members of the department who desire to remain shall be weeded out on the consideration of age, occupation and location until the required 4 are secured, and then vacancies will be filled under the new requirements.

The haste a few weeks ago to add three men to the permanent force to provide for the one day off in five seems to be playing a part in the re-organization talk, and it is charged

TO HONOR HENRY W. CLARKE.

Eighty-Fifth Birthday Remembered by Teachers of the Lenthal School.

Former Pupils Send Congratulatory Telegrams, Lively Program Follows Bountiful Supper.

The teachers of the Lenthal school did not allow the eighty-fifth birthday anniversary of their former principal, Mr. Henry W. Clarke, to pass unnoticed, having arranged a gathering of Mr. Clarke's friends Thursday evening at the residence of Miss Sarah L. Currin, one of their number, on Perry street. Here were assembled about 30 persons, including all the teachers at Lenthal, those of the Carey school, former pupils, parents of several pupils, and Mr. Clarke, the honored guest of the evening.

HENRY W. CLARKE.

In addition to a bountiful supper there was a lively program of music on the piano and violin. The feast of the entertainment was the receipt by Mr. Clarke of congratulatory telegrams, which came from former pupils from various parts of the country, some even from the Pacific coast. At the close there was more music and dancing, in which the younger members of the party participated. Mr. Clarke declined to take an active part in this feature of the program, saying he had never learned to dance and was afraid he is now too old to begin. He nevertheless showed a lively interest in the dancing as a spectator.

The following poem by Charles Swain is published at the request of Mr. Clarke:
Oh, there's a power to make each hour
As sweet as heaven designed;
As sweet as heaven designed it;
Though few there be that find it.
We seek too high for things close by,
And lose what nature found us.
For life hath here no charms so dear
As come and friends around us!
The following poem by Charles Swain is published at the request of Mr. Clarke:
We oft destroy the present joy
For future hopes and praise them;
Whist! flowers as sweet bloom at light.

If we'd but stoop to raise them,
For things afar still sweeter are;
When youth's bright spell hath
bound us;
But soon we're taught that earth hath
naught.
Like home and friends around us,
The friends that speed in time of need,
When hope's last need is shaken.
That show us still that, come what
will.

We are not quite forsaken—Though all were night, if but the
light.

Of friendship's altar crowned us,
Two did prove the bliss of earth was there.
Our home and friends around us.

MOTHER VICTORY FOR TABS

Visitors' Lead in Last Session, Although Out-Classed, an Unusual Feat.

Comets Walk Away From Second Team of Lawrence Club in Fall River—Holy Name Basket Ball.

A determined stand by Company 1, Fall River Naval Reserves in the second half of Thursday evening's basketball contest in the Father Matthew hall could not offset the big advantage piled up by the Tabs in the first period, and the locals added another hard fought struggle to their string of victories, winning 25-24. The game was somewhat out of the ordinary, inasmuch as the visiting supporters, who were expected to be out-classed, came back with enough confidence and strength to lead by a comfortable margin in the last session of the game, an unusual feat in basketball. Rooters were there by the hundreds for the Tabs, while the Fall River crowd had only one staunch supporter, their manager, who made himself heard on all occasions. During the second half, when Company 1 team was rapidly cutting down the big lead of the Tabs, the Fall River crowd had only one staunch supporter, their manager, who made himself heard on all occasions. During the second half, when Company 1 team was rapidly cutting down the big lead of the Tabs, the Fall River crowd had only one staunch supporter, their manager, who made himself heard on all occasions.

Cottrell was in for the first time this season for the Tabs, and played a fast floor game in the first half. He started the scoring on a pretty shot, and was all over the hall with the ball Nolan was in form again, scoring five goals from the floor, and the Tabs in eight tries, a total of 15 points. McGraith also did well in shooting, having six field goals to his credit. For Fall River Powers with six field goals and two fouls was the high scorer, while Barrett and Hennessy each scored a strong game.

For the first five minutes the score zig-zagged back and forth, and then the Tabs, with Nolan and McGraith doing most of the pointing, began a lead, which sent them rapidly into the closing minutes of the game. The home team, however, managed to score for this half was 15-9 in favor of the Company 1 team.

The line-up and summary:
Father Mathew. Company 1.
Cottrell, Fletcher, r.f. l.g. Hennessy
Nolan, l.f. r.g. Hayden
McGrath, c. c. Whitehead
Kirwin, r.g. L. Barrett
Horgan, l.g. r.f. Powers
Score—Father Mathew 25, Company 1 24. Goals from floor—Cottrell 6, Nolan 5, Cottrell, Kirwin, Horgan, Fletcher; Powers 6, Barrett 3, Whitehead, Hennessy. Goals from foul line—Nolan 5, Powers 2. Referee—Dunn. Scorer—Sullivan. Time—20 minutes and 15-minute halves.

The Comets of Newport walked away from the second team of the Lawrence Club of Fall River in the latter city Thursday evening. As soon as the whistle blew for the first jump the Comets kept the ball in motion for the basket, leaving the home team only a few chances. Though the floor was strange to the Newport boys they showed their training and dropped the ball in from all positions. They didn't seem to care in particular where they were when they made a shot, and the ball nearly always went through the net. The line-up:
Lawrence Club.
Comets.
Jerry Sullivan, r.f. l.g. Droque
Mahoney, l.f. r.g. Pierce Connerton, c. c. Partington
Kelley, John Sullivan, r.g. l.f. Marshall
Shreanan, l.g. r.f. Maycock
Score—Comets 46, Lawrence Club 8. Goals from floor—Sullivan 14, Kelley 4, Jerry Sullivan 2, Pierce 2, Connerton, Marshall, Droque, John Sullivan. Goals from fouls—Connerton 2. Referee—George Reagan. Scorer—R. Katz. Time—20 minute periods.

At the Holy Name hall the new league started its schedule, three games being played. The first between the Crimsons and the Reds, went to the Crimsons by a score of 14 to 3. The second, between the Violets and the Blues, was enough like the first to be the same score, 14 to 8, being won by the Blues; the third game, between the Red Sox and the Giants, was a decisive defeat for the latter, the score being Red Sox 10, Giants 0.

"OUT OF DARKNESS."

Oratorio Society to Present Gounod's Psalm CXXX in Its Original Form.

Gounod is no stranger to Newport audiences, and the Oratorio Society should certainly know how to interpret him. Next Thursday evening, for the fifth time, his name will appear on the Society's program, when his Psalm CXXX, for baritone solo, quartet, chorus and orchestra, will be given in its original form. Not a great oratorio, like "The Redemption," given April 17, 1913, nor a motet like the "Gloria," given at the Society's first concert, December 7, 1911, "Out of Darkness" is a cantata of 44 pages, requiring about half an hour for its performance.

The cantata is divided into four parts. The opening movement, adagio, andante, adagio, "Out of darkness I called unto Thee, O Lord: Lord, my God, I pray Thee, hear my crying." It is in the key of D major. It is followed by a quartet for solo voices: "There is mercy with Thee; yea, with Thee is mercy, therefore shall Thou be feared." This quartet, one of great beauty, is sung by Mrs. Mary Curley-Rooney, Mrs. Sarah Bailey-King, Dr. H. H. Luther and Mr. George Herbert Patterson.

The third movement is an allegro movement for the chorus: "From the watch of the morning, even until evening, trust thou, Israel, in God, the Lord," giving assurance that "with him is mercy and plentiful redemption." This number is full of contrast, rises to a climax of great confidence. The concluding "And He shall redeem thee, Israel," begins with a baritone recitative, leading into a chorus with baritone solo, one voice after another declaring "He shall redeem thee, Israel, from all thine iniquities." Throughout, the cantata, the instrumentation is a fitting setting for the English words as adapted by Rev. J. Troubridge, D. D., and the orchestra is masterly.

Yet it can be seen that it was the intention of the committee to have the new call force made up so far as possible of members at present serving in that capacity, to be "selected according to age, occupation and the location of their residence." The report also says: "All call men added to the department in the future shall not be less than 21 nor more than 35 years of age and shall pass both physical and mental examinations." It is taken that the present members of the department who desire to remain shall be credited on the consideration of age, occupation and location until the required 21 are secured, and then vacancies will be filled under the new requirements.

The haste a few weeks ago to add three men to the permanent force to provide for the one day off in five seems to be playing a part in the re-organization talk, and it is charged

TO HONOR HENRY W. CLARKE.

Eighty-Fifth Birthday Remembered by Teachers of the Lenthal School.

Former Pupils Send Congratulatory Telegrams, Lively Program Follows Bountiful Supper.

The teachers of the Lenthal school did not allow the eighti-fifth birthday anniversary of their former principal, Mr. Henry W. Clarke, to pass unnoticed, having arranged a gathering of Mr. Clarke's friends Thursday evening at the residence of Miss Sarah L. Curran, one of their number, on Pearl street. Here were assembled about 30 persons, including all the teachers at Lenthal, those of the Carey school, former pupils, parents of several pupils, and Mr. Clarke, the honored guest of the evening.

In addition to a bountiful supper there was a lively program of music on the piano and victrola. The feature of the entertainment was the reading by Mr. Clarke of congratulatory telegrams, which came from former pupils from various parts of the country, some even from the Pacific coast. At the close there was more music, and dancing, in which the younger members of the party participated. Mr. Clarke declined to take an active part in this feature of the program, saying he had never learned to dance and was afraid he is now too old to begin. He nevertheless showed a lively interest in the dancing as a spectator.

Oh, there's a power to make each hour
As sweet as heaven designed it;
An sweet a heaven designed it;
Though fate there be that find it,
We seek too high for things close by,
And lose what nature found us;
For life hath here no charms so dear
As home and friends around us;
The following poem by Charles Swain is published at the request of Mr. Clarke:
We oft destroy the present joy
For future hopes—and praise them:
Whilst flowers as sweet bloom at
our feet,
If we'd but stoop to raise them,
For things afar still sweeter are
When youth's bright spell hath
passed us,
But soon we're taught that earth hath
naught
Like home and friends around us.
The friends that speed in time of need,
When hope's last need is shaken,
That show us still that, come what
will,
We are not quite forsaken—Though all were night, if but the
light
Of friendship's altar crowned us,
'Twould prove the bliss of earth was this—
Our home and friends around us.

NOTHER VICTORY FOR THE TABS

Visitors' Lead in Last Session, Although Out-Classed, an Unusual Feat.

Comets Walk Away From Second Team of Lawrence Club in Fall River—Holy Name Basket Ball.

A determined stand by Company 1, Fall River Naval Reserve in the second half of Thursday evening's basketball contest in the Father Statue hall could not offset the big advantage piled up by the Tabs in the first period, and the locals added another hard fought struggle to their string of victories, winning 35-24. The game was somewhat out of the ordinary, inasmuch as the visiting team, apparently hopelessly out-classed, came back with enough confidence and strength to lead by a comfortable margin in the last session of the game, an unusual feat in basketball. Rooters were there by the hundreds for the Tabs, while the Fall River crowd had only one staunch supporter, their manager, who made himself heard on all occasions. During the second half, when Company 1 team was rapidly cutting down the big lead the fans were in a continual uproar, imploring the Tabs to score, and involuntarily giving vent to shouts as the Fall River team missed the basket repeatedly in a fusillade of shots. For a short time it looked as if the visitors would tie the score, but the Tabs, backed in one losing rally, scoring their total nine points of the half while the "Splendid City" aggregation was making but two.

Cottrell was in for the first time this season for the Tabs, and played a fast floor game in the first half. He started the scoring on a pretty shot, and was all over the ball with the ball. McGraith was in form again, scoring five goals from the floor and five foul goals in eight tries, a total of 15 points. McGraith also did well in shooting, having six field goals to his credit. For Fall River Powers with six field goals and two fouls was the high scorer, while Barrett and Hennessy each played a strong game.

For the first time the Tabs were zig-zagged back and forth, and then the Tabs, with Nolan and McGraith doing most of the pointing, began a rally which sent them rapidly into the lead, so that it resembled a rout at the close of the first half, 26-9.

The big surprise was reserved for the second half, when Company 1 started, and it did not look as though the Tabs could prevent them from scoring. Barrett sunk in the first goal, then Powers shot in two in rapid succession, and followed these with a foul try and still another goal, making the score 26-18 before McGraith dropped in one for the Tabs. Barrett made another goal, by making good on a foul change. Barrett made another goal, and the score was 28-22. Just then the Tabs sent in three goals in rapid succession, which clinched the game. The score for this half was 15-9 in favor of the Company 1 team.

The line-up and summary:

Father Statue.	Company 1.

Nolan, l.f.	r.g. Hayden
McGrath, c.	c. Whitehead
Kiwin, r.g.	r.f. Barrett

George-Father Statue 35, Company 1. Goals from floor—McGrath, 6; Nolan 5, Cottrell, Kiwin, Horgan, Fletcher; Powers 6, Barrett 3, Whitehead, Hennessy. Goals from foul line—Nolan 5, Powers 2. Referee—Dunn. Scorer—Sullivan. Timer—Walters. Time—20-minute and 15-minute halves.

The Comets of Newport walked away from the second team of the Lawrence Club of Fall River in the latter class Thursday evening. As soon as the whistle blew for the first jump the Comets kept the ball in motion for the basket, giving the home team only a few chances. Though the floor was strange to the Newport boys they showed their training and dropped the ball in from all positions. They didn't seem to care in particular where they were when they made a shot, and the ball nearly always went through the net.
